very compact clay, gravel, or silt rock. This is called the parent material.

There are many differences in soil, depending on the rock from which it was formed. Silt and clay have very fine particles. Sand and gravel have very large or coarse particles. Usually sand doesn't contain much humus, and clay and silt and loam are apt to have a lot in them. Sand is light, while clay and loam are usually dark in color. Water soaks on through sand gravel, but it doesn't soak into clay very fast. Clay holds more moisture than sand, however. Humus in the soil helps the plants grow better and enriches the soil.

We lose a lot of soil every year through wind and water erosion and by mis-use of land. We have cut down forests that absorbed moisture and prevented erosion and have over grazed and over cropped the fields and ranges. Lack of fertilization, lime, crop rotation, and other measures which build up soil have caused much damage.

The top covering of the land has been removed so that water runs off bare fields taking the soil with it.

Contour farming, strip cropping, terracing, grassed waterways, shelterbelts, and wise use of land prevent erosion. Contour furrows and terraces hold water and keep it from washing away. Grassed waterways carry away the excess moisture. Shelterbelts prevent wind and water erosion, restore humus to the soil, furnish shelter for animals, help cool the atmosphere and make rain through the transpiration of their leaves.

Erosion control practices, wise use of land, use of fertilizers, cover crops, etc., conserve and build up the soil for future use.

The Soil Conservation Districts were organized in Nebraska in 1937. Nebraska was the first state west of the Mississippi to have all of its farm and ranch land in Soil Conservation Districts. The District area to help farmers in using good soil and water conservation practices.

S&H GREEN STAMPS

Green Stamps help keep NEBRASKA PRICES DOWN!

Like the ads of local merchants that you see in this newspaper, S&H Green Stamps boost business. At the same time they help keep prices down.

Here is why: When a store sells more, it can sell for less, since bigger volume brings lower costs.

Stores that use S&H Green Stamps must sell competitively. Nebraska housewives are expert shoppers. They read the ads. They check and compare prices. And they can't be fooled!

Trading stamps are being saved today by two out of three American families—about 35 million in all. And their use is still growing in this and other States.

For the best values, shop at the stores in your community that give S&H Green Stamps.
