FIGHTING FARM FIRES

A fire on the farm has always been dreaded by the Nebraska farmer living in isolation on the prairies.

Nothing can really compensate a man for the loss of his home and his possessions—not even insurance in adequate amounts.

During 1958 farm fires in Nebraska claimed the lives of 13 persons, 2 of them children. They seriously injured 116 others. They destroyed farm property worth nearly $2,000,000.

The toll would have been much higher were it not for the fine work of Nebraska's hundreds of volunteer firemen and fire-fighting trucks owned by Local Fire Protection Districts all over the state.

The Rural Fire District idea is a simple and effective one. It provides a fair and low cost method of making available to farmers modern fire-fighting trucks and equipment especially resigned to fight farm fires. It gives farmers the opportunity to provide adequate fire-fighting units for the protection of their own property and the lives of their families.

In the past ten years great strides have been made in the Rural Fire District movement.

If you are interested in starting the organization of a Rural Fire District in your locality we will do all we can to help.
