Donations Still Coming; May Top $750 Mark

The Bobby Kurtz fund is still growing. It has pushed over the $500 mark and checks are still coming into the Frontier office and the Bank of Orchard.

Already over $500 had been turned over to the special fund at the Orchard bank. Jim Clifton president of the bank, and one of Bobby's staunchest supporters, estimates that the fund will reach $750 by early next week.

The fund will officially close next Tuesday afternoon. All checks and donations will be picked up and deposited to Bobby's account.

The Frontier will pick up the names of all persons who have donated to the Kurtz fund since last week's issue of the paper and the grand total and list of donors will be published.

Originally the Frontier had planned to close the fund this week but so many donations were being received at the last moment that it was decided to wait one more week to give everyone a chance to mail in their donations.

May we say that the response to Bobby's plight has been rich and rewarding, not alone in monetary value, but in the expression of friendship and sincere neighborliness of everyone who has given.

Next week's issue of the Frontier will carry the results and we are sure that everyone who has given will feel richly rewarded when they see what the friendliness of good people can do for a small boy.
