

Biscuits, Bones Pay Baby Sitter For This Family

Would you like to be able to pay your baby sitter with dog biscuits?

The Duane Miller's at Chambers do just that. What's more they get the biscuits wholesale. Mr. Miller runs the grocery store. The baby sitter is Lassie, a beautiful buff and white collie. "I wouldn't go so far as to say she really baby sits, now," says Mrs. Miller. Diana, almost six, Norm four and Ken three, all enthusiastically agree. (You can't call folks that age babies, for goodness sake!) Lassie just snuggles knowingly, as she watches them from the corner of her eye.

Mr. Miller, who has been in business in Chambers since 1952 purchased Lassie as a companion for his children 2 1/2 years ago. Instead of a pet she became a protector as well as a loved member of the family.

"She is with the children constantly," Mrs. Miller says. "When they were smaller she kept them from straying from the grocery store, by barking and gentle nudges." She will not allow her small charges near the power mower. They are supervised at home by this furry mother's helper and when they travel guess who is in the car first?

Once Lassie was stolen. The family was visiting relatives at Chadron. One day the collie was missing. After two days of fruitless searching the Millers were forced to leave for home. "Broken hearted because our Lassie was gone." Two days later a scratching was heard at the Chadron home and a hungry, tired fox-sore dog appeared. She had evidently slipped a chain because the hair on her beautiful ruff was worn off and had come back seeking her family. A telephone call brought Mr. Miller on the double to return the lost one to a reception committee of three eagerly waiting children and their mother.

Would they sell Lassie? The children looked horrified. Young as they are they realize that love and devotion is something money can't buy.
