I. Heumesser Is Honor Guest At Clan Reunion

A reunion was held for a family recently, which no doubt could top all celebrations before or since. And a former O'Neill man who was there can testify to the fact.

The reunion was held overseas and the principal participant was Mr. Ignaz Heumesser, of Stanton. He had not seen his relatives since 1913 when he emigrated to America, at the age of 30, when he settled at Ewing, and took up farming. He lived at Ewing for 38 years, after which he worked at St. Mary's Academy until he retired and moved to Stanton in the spring of 1958.

Mr. Heumesser was born in Oberdorf, Germany, on January 31, 1883. When he came to the United States, he left his parents and one brother and one sister. His parents he never saw again—the father died in 1915 and the mother in 1935.

The reunion with the brother and sister and their families, and other relatives was a gala occasion, according to Mr. Heumesser. He says the people of Western Germany (where Oberdorf is located) pined him with many questions and that he was welcomed there as a long-lost brother. On Easter Sunday, he attended the old church, in which he was baptized and confirmed, and was warmly greeted by its ministers.

On the following Saturday, a church and musical society of the town held a service in honor of the guest, after which the whole community retired to an old inn where they spent a few pleasant hours.

As a further celebration of an old custom, the people of the community all gathered on the Sunday after Easter with the first Communicants, and walked to church to the accompaniment of the village band.

Mr. Heumesser said it is remarkable how the West Germans have "worked their way up like this," after two such disastrous wars. "Everyone has work, and there are no unemployed."

The Stanton man flew from Omaha to Stuttgart. During the trip he
