Homemakers

Corner . . .

By Catherine Indra

Home Extension Agent
Last week we discussed setting the table. This week let's continue with a similar topic, Meal-time Courtesy.

Again this material is available in a bulletin available from our office.

The basis of all good manners is a kindly thoughtfulness for others whether you are eating at home or in public. Successful entertaining depends more on the spirit of hospitality and the relaxed atmosphere that prevails in the home than on elaborate menu, table settings, and service.

Attention to these guides of courtesy will help the family to be more considerate of others, and to be at ease in any gathering.

If a blessing is asked, the head is bowed and the hands kept in the lap.

The hostess unfolds her napkin first, takes up her silver to be used and indicates that it is time for all to begin eating.

Be consistent in serving. An accepted way is to offer food such as rolls or relishes from the left with the left hand.

Serve or pour beverages from the right with the right hand. Refill glasses during the meal without moving the glass. Use a napkin to catch the drip. Handle dishes and plates by the outer edge. Do not place the thumb over the rim.

If you wish something, ask to have it passed. Do not reach in front of anyone.

In cutting food hold the knife in the right hand, the fork in the left, times down. Grasp the handle firmly and naturally. The ends of the handles rest in the palms of your hands and are not seen. Extend the index fingers along the handles to steady and guide the knife and fork.

Use fork rather than spoon whenever possible.

If food or drink is too hot, let it stand until cooler. Never blow on it.

If asked to express a choice of food, do so at once. If not, take what is served without comment. A bit of bread, but nothing else, may be used to help food upon the fork.

Use a spoon to stir and test the temperature of a hot drink. Do not leave the spoon standing in the cup. Lay it on the saucer. Never drink from a cup with a spoon standing in it.

Fish bones, as other bones taken in the mouth, are removed by taking between the finger and thumb and removing between closed lips.

The pits of stewed prunes or cherries that are eaten with a spoon are made as clean and dry as possible. Use the thumb, then dig into the spoon with which you are eating and put on the edge of the plate. Seeds and skin may be removed with the finger and thumb with lips closed, or you may drop pits or seeds into the cupped hand, held close to the lips.

Food eaten with the fingers includes: bread, olives, pickles, radishes, nuts, celery, strips of carrots, French fried potatoes, potato chips, cookies, cake (that isn't sticky), corn on the cob and confections.

To butter bread break off a small piece, hold it on the plate, spread with butter. Do not butter a
