Meet Your Correspondent

(Another story in the "Meet Your Correspondent" series) Mrs. Ben Asher, Page correspondent, feels she is a newcomer to the writing field as she has only been writing for The Frontier for two years, however, she grew up with a family of printers. Before her marriage she worked for several years with her dad and brothers in a printing plant which her dad owned. Of course, her job was in the book-binding department, but apparently some of the ink rubbed off because she does a mighty fine job reporting on the happenings in her community. The Page writer was born in Manchester, England and came to this country with her parents and two brothers when she was eight months old. All of her unmarried years were spent on the east coast, mainly in Brooklyn, New York. She attended grade school and James Madison high school in Brooklyn. While living with some friends in New Jersey, she met Ben Asher who was stationed at Fort Monmouth, N. J. They were married October 3, 1946. Mr. and Mrs. Asher came to Page December 31, 1946 when Ben was discharged from the army. They have lived in their present home, a 320 acre farm about seven miles from Page, for 12 years. They have three children, Ben jr. and Roberta in high school, and Debbie, a fourth grader in country school. Mrs. Asher is a member of the Page Methodist church and is very active in the American Legion auxiliary, both as the auxiliary historian and as a member. She is also a member of an Extension club. Her hobbies are reading and embroidery work. Any kind of mystery book provides moments of enjoyment for Mrs. Asher. To her friends, it's a "mystery" how she manages to find time to be a correspondent with her many interests in life.
