This is the Challenge

"We the people of the United States" . . .

Thus began that great American instrument of law, the Constitution.

Once again today it becomes necessary that "We the people of the United States" do declare ourselves dedicated to the same principles that first made us strong. This we must do if we are to survive . . . if we are to survive as "one nation, under God, indivisible, and with liberty and justice for all."

Our forefathers met the challenge of tyranny from abroad and emerged victorious because they believed their cause was righteous and just. We, today, must examine ourselves in the mirror of truth and ask ourselves whether we too believe that our cause is righteous and just. We must firmly believe that our system of Government which recognizes the existence of an Almighty God and the rights of the individual in a government of law and order . . . is a far superior form of government and way of life than that which Communism would thrust upon us.

Without this dedication to principle . . . to a government by the consent of the governed . . . to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness . . . without this dedication to all that our forefathers held dear when they formulated the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights and the Constitution, we cannot survive.

This is the Challenge
