Meet Your Correspondent

(Another article in the "Know Your Correspondent" series) Meet Mrs. Merrill Anderson, the correspondent for the Celia area who has writing in her blood. She isn't content to write of the doings in her neighborhood for The Frontier, she also writes articles for other papers including a column, has written many features and is also the author of a song and a proposed book of poetry. This correspondent was born and educated at Long Pine. She was married to Merrill A. Anderson in 1925 at Winner, S. D., and the couple made their home at Martin, S. D., for eight years. They then moved to Clearfield, S. D., where they resided seven years before settling in the Red-bird community in 1942.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have four children, Percy, Columbus; Merlyn, O'Neill, and Keith and Mrs. Robert Wells, Monroe, There are 12 grandchild-Wash. ren.

Anderson first started Mrs. writing for The Frontier when Cal Stewart was publisher, and at that time she had two columns, the Red Bird News and "Echoes from the Valley."

She has done some free lance writing, including some speeches for a public speaker, and has also an interest in photography. She wrote the words and music for a new song, "Sitting Bull" which is under promotion at the present time by the National Songwriters Guild, of which Mrs. Anderson is a member.

How she manages to keep up with all her outside activities and still do such a fine job of corresponding, keeps her friends wondering. She belongs to the Nebraska Historical society; is
