Ham Operators Lend Assistance To Community During Blizzard

By Matt Beha
A young soldier visiting at Ewing found himself AWOL due to the blizzard conditions last week and was unable to notify his superiors at Ft. Riley, Kan.
The soldier contacted Sgt. Bill Cousins at O'Neill concerning his plight and Cousins got in touch with the ham operators in this area. From then on the problem was solved as the operators contacted Ft. Riley and an extension of leave was arranged for the soldier.
This was just one of the 1000 messages that the amateur radio operators handled during the past storm which left telephone lines out of service and roads impassable.
Another example was the locating of a doctor from Ainsworth who had left for Omaha to attend a convention. His wife worried as the storm became more severe and knowing that the doctor planned to stop at Norfolk to pick up another doctor for the trip, she asked George Botsford, SOVVK operator at Ainsworth, to see if he reached Norfolk.
In answer to their inquiry they discovered the doctor had not arrived and the search began. All up and down the line between Ainsworth and Omaha, ham operators contacted motels, hotels, etc., to locate the missing man. This task was successfully completed, as were each of the other calls, when the doctor was finally located safe in Omaha.
From March 11 until March 14 the number of emergency messages handled by the operators involved the cooperation of all radio amateurs in Nebraska and throughout the country.
The first traffic through amateur means began at 3:45 p.m. March 11 when people found they would be unable to get home. Many attending the state basketball tournament and conventions found themselves stranded by the storm. The first call was from a woman at Valentine asking the operators to get through to her husband on a ranch. By traveling through Rapid City, S. D., wires, the operators were able to assure the rancher of his wife's safety.
Calls were handled through Huron, S. D., and Winner, S. D.; Valentine, Ainsworth, Omaha, Burwell, Ord, Fremont, Lincoln, North Platte, Grand Island, Norfolk, Wayne, Neligh, Orchard, Bassett, Atkinson, Chambers and O'Neill all in Nebraska; California, Sioux City, Ia., and Washington, D. C.
Among the calls were death messages, birth reports, request for medical aid and medicines, school and meeting cancellations, locating of missing persons and assurance of the safety of snow-bound residents.
Lew Lewis, WORAM Clearwater operator, checked on the welfare of some of the people in his private plane and then would report on his radio station. One helicopter was dispatched by amateur radios and also several planes.
To name all of the operators who assisted during the emergency period would be impossible. The radio amateurs of Nebraska wish to thank the radio stations, telegraph offices, telephone personnel, state highway department, REA and state patrol for their assistance in making it possible to deliver the messages and for information given them.
Operators practice several times a day for just such emergencies. Their only desire is that they may be of assistance to their communities.

Bloopers!

Once in awhile, news sent into the office has such an unusual twist that it provides a chuckle for the office workers. Sometimes it is a typographical error that causes the humor and then again, it is the misspelling that brings the laugh. Here is a collection of such phrases (with an added word or two) and The Frontier hopes it adds a smile to your day.
"He came by plane which dropped him in his father's pasture." (turd)
"Fifteen members answered roll call with a favorite smell." (phev)
"Mrs. Jones is getting well slowly and her friends are glad." (poor sports)
"She went to Columbus and took the bus." (thief)
"He flew to California." (superman)
"A misalliance shower was given." (never work)
"They had Mr. and Mrs. Jones for dinner." (cannibals)
"In playing bridge Mrs. Jones got high." (shouldn't drink)
"Stock up on bedding and lay away at . . . store." (hiding?)
"The bride's skirt had back insets of lace and French boys." (different)
"They went to Chicago where they caught the train." (puff puff)
"She drove her children to Omaha." (unwanted)

Amelia News

By Miss Florence Lindsey
No school or mail in Amelia until Thursday of last week due to the big snow. We received about 15 inches of snow, and much drifting brought all traffic to a stand still. It was difficult for the ranchers to get feed to their cattle, and some livestock losses resulted. Most all the telephone service was out of order but no one in this vicinity was without electricity. All roads were blocked until Thursday.
Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Widman went to Ainsworth Friday to visit her mother, Mrs. D. L. Fancher and family.
Mr. and Mrs. George Fullerton visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fullerton, at Atkinson Friday evening.

PHOSPHATE WORKS BEST IN "TRIPLE HARNESS"

Research has proved that when phosphate is applied in a chemical combination with nitrogen and potash, your crops will utilize up to twice as much of the phosphate as when phosphate is applied alone.
That's why it pays to apply Lincoln Pellet-Sized Fertilizer, containing a chemically combined, balanced ration of all three major plant food elements.
Lincoln Pellet-Sized Fertilizers—available in all Chemix grades—produce better results because they are formulated in Nebraska for Nebraska crops and soils.

A Poem From Mrs. Eby . . .

—The Testimony of Dag Hammarskjold—
Faith is a state of the mind and the soul. In this sense we can understand the word of the Spanish mystic, John of the Cross, "Faith is the union of God with the soul." The language of religion is a set of formulas which register a basic spiritual experience. It must not be regarded as describing in terms to be defined by philosophy. The reality which is accessible to our senses and which we can analyze with the tools of logic.
I was late in understanding what this meant. When I finally reached that point, the beliefs in which I was brought up and which, in fact had given my life direction even while my intellect still challenged their validity, were recognized by me as mine in their own right and by my free choice.
Now I feel that I can endorse those convictions without any compromise of the demands of that intellectual honesty which is the very key to maturity of mind.
Dag Hammarskjold — the Nobel Peace prize awarded to him in 1961 — and who gave his life in a peace mission.
