The First Thanksgiving

Children do you know the story of the first Thanksgiving day, founded by the Pilgrim fathers in that time so far away. They have given for religion, wealth and comfort, yes and more left their homes and friends and loved ones for the bleak and barren shore on New England's rugged headland, now where peaceful Plymouth lies. There they built their rude logcabins neat the cold forbidding sky.

And to often even the bravest felt their blood run cold with dread lest the wild and savage red man burn the roof above their heads. Want and sickness death and sorrow met their eyes on every hand, and before the spring had reached them they had buried half their band.

But those patient Pilgrim mothers as the harvest time drew near, looked with happy thankful faces at the full corn in the ear. Then the Governor, William Bradford, in the gladness of his heart to thank God for those brave Pilgrims, set a special day apart.

That was in the Autumn children in sixteen hundred and twenty one, scarce a year from when they landed and the Colony began. Now in cold and bleak November when our Thanksgiving feast is spread. "Think", its the same time honored custom of those Pilgrims long since dead.

Mr. Bruce J. Rehberg, Editor
The Frontier
O'Neill, Nebraska

Dear Mr. Rehberg:

Your leading editorial in The Frontier for November 15 has come to my attention.

During the community meeting which I attended at Imman, I tried to call the community's attention to the unfavorable image of their community which was being created throughout the state by the unpleasant school situation at that time. My comment was that the "Imman School situation had resulted in much unfavorable publicity for their community."

I am sure that I did not say that the situation could be blamed on unfavorable publicity as you quote me as having said in your editorial. Such a statement certainly would not have been consistent with the idea which I was attempting to develop.

The problems of education need much more publicity than the newspapers in the State of Nebraska have been giving them in the past. All conscientious people who are vitally interested in developing better schools for our Nebraska boys and girls should welcome any attempt on the part of the press to tell a true and accurate story of the shortcomings which are found in some schools. This we feel that you did in your reporting of the school problem at Imman and rather than in any way condemning you for this publicity, we want to thank you sincerely for it. We hope that you will continue to point up the school problems in Nebraska so that people can be made aware of the seriousness of many of them.

I hope that you will use the columns of your editorial page to clear up any misunderstanding which might have come about as a result of your editorial. This I am sure, that in the interests of honest journalism, you will want to do.

Very sincerely yours,
MEL OLSON, Consultant
in School Administration
