

A Day in the Life of a Farm Girl

Full of life and proud to be a farm girl is Sandra (Sandy) Gilmore, 11 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Gilmore of Route 2, Bristol, Wisconsin. The family operates a 187-acre dairy farm. Among the livestock are 36 milk cows, 150 chickens, a few ducks and some hogs. Let's follow Sandy around for a day and see why she enjoys her natural heritage.

*How's this for a smile of beauty?
Ya like that American charm?
It's nature's special gift to girls
Born and raised on a wonderful farm.*

*Off to Hazel Dell School in the morning
With books, her lunch and a chum.
You better believe they have secrets.
And they're safe 'cause the word is mum.*

*Here's a moment the girls will remember.
So proud as the flag is unfurled.
When it reaches the top of that 20-foot pole
It's flying on top of the world.*

*Each day means another tough problem . . .
A mixture of pleasure and strife.
Learn to smile as you
face them, honey,
You'll have problems the rest of your life.*

*Boys can be downright ornery.
And girls always get in the way.
But when brothers need
extra ball players, Even sister's invited to play.*
