The president, last week, in his speech at American University announced that the United States would immediately inaugurate a "no test" policy in regard to nuclear weapons. The U. S., Britain and Russia agreed to another round of test ban negotiations in Moscow in mid-July. The President stated that the U. S. to "make clear our good faith" will forego further tests in the atmosphere for as long as other nations do the same. "We will not be the first to resume," Mr. Kennedy pledged.

In effect, we are saying that we will keep this pledge if they agree not to test. This was tried once before and Russia did not keep her pledge. From all the agreements which the communists have made, we should now know that agreements are only kept as long as it suits their convenience. Their word is not worth the paper it is written on. We are presently ahead of Russia in the field of nuclear explosions; but if we continue to make this one-sided agreement, we will soon lose our advantage. I hope that the President is not once again being outmaneuvered by the Russians.

"We are all supposed to be of a mold - good, pert, freshly scrubbed Americans, believing that capitalism and free enterprise came down to us on stone tablets from the mountain and that democracy was devised by angels. But the truth of the matter is that the minority, who are the elite financially and culturally, do not trust democracy very far. They tremble and with good reason, at what would happen to their wealth and position if the masses ever really could bring the vote of the majority into full play."

The fight over Federal aid to education is, on the surface, a political fight, with spicy dashes of racial prejudice and religious bitterness thrown in. But under the surface, in reality, it is an economic battle. It falls in the classic pattern of historic battles between the haves and the have-nots, between those who control the wealth of the land and those who make up its masses.

"The Root of Opposition." This concerns Federal aid to education, and I quote below from the pamphlet.
