EVEN IN A BRAND NEW HOUSE... a two wire electric service is obsolete Your first clue to an inadequate home wiring system is in the number of wires used to bring electricity from the power lines into your home. In 8 out of 10 of today's homes, obsolete two-wire service is the "bottleneck" to better electrical living, supplying only enough electricity for lights and a few plug-in appliances. It takes three-wire service and a main fuse panel capacity of at least 100 amperes to safely and efficiently serve the electrical requirements of the average family of today, and to provide sufficient additional capacity for their needs of tomorrow. Now is the time to improve and modernize the wiring in your home! No doubt you can qualify for a low-cost home improvement loan requiring no down-payment and providing for easy monthly payments. Consult your own electrical contractor and your local bank or financing firm. CONSUMERS PUBLIC POWER DISTRICT YOUR AIR CONDITIONER NEEDS MODERN WIRING TOO! ALL room air conditioning units should be operated on a separate circuit to which no other appliances are attached. Many units require 240-volt service on separate circuits.
