

Wind Test into Final Stages

C of C Hears Report; '53 Film Shown

A spokesman for the Air Force Cambridge research center's Operation Prairiegrass, being conducted here this summer, Monday evening told 30 members of the Chamber of Commerce that the operations are proceeding satisfactorily although more favorable weather is hoped for in August.

A subcontractor, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has a team at work on a diffusion experiment, which is the feature of the 1956 wind test. Research here is considered basic.

A film was shown concerning the 1953 wind test sponsored by Air Force-Cambridge in cooperation with 14 colleges and universities.

The '53 test involved the discovery of increased winds aloft at low levels and the results have been documented in worldwide meteorological circles as the O'Neill wind profile.

In that first test winds were discovered to be stronger over the prairie than anticipated. The condition had been observed by scientists elsewhere in the world but the '53 O'Neill congress and interpreted the theories and the results of that study, the spokesman told the Chamber, is now a meteorological standard.

"If August produces more favorable weather than we've had thus far," the spokesman said, "we'll have the 1956 study 'but-toned up' at the outset of September."

Texas A&M college and the University of Wisconsin physics departments also are at work on special problems in connection with the current test. Both schools were represented here in 1953.

Congressman A. L. Miller (R) of Kimball was a guest. The fourth district representative told of the 84th congress and interpreted the drought features of the soil bank. State Sen. Frank Nelson, a member, was also present.

Secretary John Harrington said the early membership activity accounted for the following memberships for the 1956-'57 year:

- Ben Franklin Store, J. M. McDonald, McIntosh Jewelry, Osborne Shoe Store, J. C. Penney Co., North - Nebraska Builders, Coast-to-Coast Store, Spets-Ray Lumber Co., Myrt's Cafe, Slat's Cafe, Shelhamer Emt. Co.
- American Gear Co., Kersenbrock Texaco, Graham's Phillips '68", J. D. Cronin, Dr. H. D. Gildersleeve, William W. Griffin, Elkhorn Valley National Farm Loan Association, Elkhorn Flower Shop, First National bank.
- Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., O'Neill Production Credit Association, Evan's Beauty Shop, Holt County Broadcasting Corp., Harrington Insurance Agency, Dean's Barber Shop, Paul Baker (Conoco), Harry Ressel, Shelhamer Foods & Produce, Tim Harrington, G. Gillespie, Western Auto Store.

Federal Money for Roads Plentiful

LINCOLN — There will be a big road question—one of many—up before the next session of the legislature.

It will concern how Nebraska can get out from under a whopping pile of federal road dollars. In the next five years, if all available federal funds were matched, a total of $168,000,000 worth of roads could be built.

State Engineer L. N. Ress has put the matter in graphic form. He said: "We've got federal money running out our ears."

The question now, Ress said, is whether Nebraskans want to take advantage of the opportunity to get a firm grip on the state's road problem.

"The question," he said, "is do the people want to take advantage of it (federal money), or pay millions of dollars in federal taxes and have it go to other states?"

"Nebraska now is in the 'big leagues' when it comes to the road building potential, Ress said.

The engineer takes the position that he is just that—an engineer and road administrator—and that he should not be beating the drums for more highway user revenue.

Ress has laid the problem before the advisory state highway commission, with the statement of matching federal road funds to be met, but also a selling job must be done on the interstate road.

There is opposition to the highway, and Ress said he finds it even within membership of the commission.

The network would consist of a four-lane, divided highway across the nation, and Nebraska, with the federal government paying nine dollars out of every 10 dollars' cost.

Ress said unless cities and counties match more federal money, and use up that allocated to them, the state won't be able to match the federal government. This has not happened in the past but because of the new allotment of funds, it could.

The next five years will be critical ones for the state's road building aspirations.

The highway commission has directed its secretary, Owen Boyles, to draw up material for presentation to the public on the problem of the availability of federal funds.

The problem is two-fold. First, the state has more money than ever for regular road work, and a king-size amount for the interstate. Ress has emphasized that Nebraska first will turn its attention to regular roads, then the interstate.

Preliminary plans already have been made for a segment of the interstate system between Omaha and Lincoln.

Another possible problem to confront the next legislature, in the opinion of Merle Kingsbury of Ponca, a member of the commission, is the large number of requests to put roads back on the state system.

The last legislature lopped off some 900 miles, but added about half that amount of mileage. The mileage taken off must be maintained by counties. The roads put on are maintained by the state.

Over 45 miles of state-maintained road was lopped-off in Holt county alone.

Because of the increasing pressure from the federal funds angle, Ress says he feels the commission is going to have to meet more often.
