Offers Salad Making Hints

Last week I promised you some hints on salad making. True to our motto, here they are: Sliced tomatoes, or tomatoes, are good, with salads of meat or vegetables. And home-raised tomatoes have so much more flavor than the more insipid ones we buy before we have them in the garden.

Crisp young carrots cut into sunny slivers dress up the plainest salad and make it more fun to eat. The raw, tender inside leaves of spinach add an interesting flavor to other salad greens. A small bit of tobasco sauce or horseradish sends a plain French dressing straight to flavor heaven—that is, if you go for seasonings in the first place.

A fruit gelatin, sliced or cut into glistening cubes, gives that cool, colorful jewel effect that's always enticing. When dressing salad greens with oil and vinegar, first season with salt and pepper, add oil, then vinegar. If vinegar is added before oil, the greens become wet and the oil doesn't cling to them, but settles to the bottom instead.

Cucumbers, young and tender, give a cool, enticing look if you use them unpeeled and fluted. Draw the prongs of a fork lengthwise down the cucumber to make parallel grooves. Then slice them. Older cucumbers may be peeled first. Brighten up the borders of lettuce leaves or pineapple rings by dipping them in gay paprika. Pineapple looks tempting, too, when the edge is rolled in finely chopped parsley or chopped nuts.

Use the large leaves for the base of the cup and fill it with the smaller ones. Use small in the lettuce cup will not balance properly on the plate by itself, do not break the rib in the leaf. Just place a few pieces of lettuce or
