The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. A. J. Paschang.

Music was by the church choir. Tom and George Bigelow, brothers of the bride, were acolytes.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, appeared in a gown of radiant nylon sheer over slipper satin. Venice lace outlined the scoop neckline and shirred sleeves of the molded bodice. The bouffant skirt, worn over hoops, was styled with loose panels floating from a band of lace that curved around the hip-line and down the back ending in a chapel train. She carried a white carnation cascade bouquet.
