

Phone Company Asks for Increase

"In order to meet the higher cost of furnishing telephone service, an adjustment in telephone rates is necessary," J. B. Moore, vice-president and general manager of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company, stated as the company filed an application with the state railway commission requesting authority to adjust its rates and charges in Nebraska.

"It has been almost four years since there was a general rate adjustment in Nebraska," Moore stated. "The cost of doing business has steadily increased during this period. The company is no longer able to absorb these rising costs although every reasonable effort has been made to offset them through economical and efficient operating procedures and equipment."

"In comparison with other businesses, we have experienced higher costs of construction and operation, including higher wage costs. Wage costs alone have increased $2,400,000 during this period. At the end of 1952 our average investment per telephone was $291. For every telephone added since then the increase in investment has averaged $578."
