

Vary the Breakfast Orange
Six New Ways

California oranges lend themselves to such a variety of servings that it's easy to get the family off to a good start six new ways. Eyes will brighten automatically at such a golden beginning for breakfast, and the children will get their vitamins the most delightful way possible.

1. Orange Breakfast Flower: Stand the orange on end and cut downward into eighths, leaving just enough at the bottom to hold the pieces together. Spread these petal-sections apart and garnish the center with parsley.
2. Orange Cartwheels: Cut a generous slice from end of orange with a sharp knife, and peel with a saw motion, round and round; slice crosswise. Arrange cartwheels for an attractive serving.
3. Nature's own orange package: California orange in half served as you would a grapefruit, garnished with a cherry.
4. Unpeeled wedges: These wedges look attractive too and are easily eaten with the fingers. To prepare wedges cut as for breakfast flower, cutting through bottom.
5. Quickie half slices: Stand orange on its side and slice downwards into cartwheels, leaving peel on. Cut cartwheels in half. Combine with other fruits.
6. Orange chunks: Cut cartwheels as above and then cut each cartwheel into quarters or sixths.

The versatile orange is good however you serve it.
