between Snyder and West Point. He attended a rural school in this locality, later a Catholic parochial school. There were eight other children in the Schueth family.

Mr. Schueth was born at West Point in 1887. Her maiden name was Mary Vogel.

They were married October 9, 1907, by Rev. Joseph Ruesing at St. Mary's Catholic church in West Point.

Mr. Schueth had visited Holt county in the spring of that year and purchased a 160-acre farm three miles north of Ewing. After their marriage they established housekeeping on the farm, where they resided three years.

In 1910 Mr. Schueth went to work for the P. M. Conger Lumber company in Ewing and stayed on under three changes of ownership. The yard subsequently was owned by the Crowell firm of Blair, later it was known as the Independent Lumber company and now is known as the West Lumber & Coal company.

Time was, Mr. Schueth recalls, there were two lumberyards at Ewing. "We always had three or four men working at our yard," he remembers. "We bought hogs on the side and for many years provided Ewing's hog market."

With the advent of the livestock markets, the lumbermen quit buying and selling hogs.

"Sometimes the mister would come home about as dirty as one," his wife volunteered wryly.

Several months ago a sore developed on Mr. Schueth's right leg, requiring medical attention. Because of his diabetic condition, the sore did not heal. In Our Lady of Lourdes hospital, surgeons attempted to switch blood channels in his right hip in an effort to save the leg.

So far so good.

Mr. Schueth tells friends he'll be out shopping wood in a week or two. Doctors are not so confident.

The Schueths have one son, Leo, who lives at Humphrey. They have two grandsons—Eugene, who is with the army in Germany, and Robert, who works in Norfolk.

Mr. Schueth has one living sister—Mrs. Agnes Stalp, 83, of Mt. Angel, Wash. Mrs. Schueth has a brother, Fred, who lives near Atkinson, and two sisters, Mrs. Theodore Lampan of Ephrata, Wash., and Mrs. Walter, who lives in the St. John community.

Mr. Schueth has a cousin, Albert, living in the Deloit locality. The couple lives in retirement in the northwest part of Ewing

WHAT MAKES AMERICA GREAT?

Because we are so accustomed to them, the average American, if called upon to list his rights and privileges, would most likely include less than half of them.

He might even overlook his right to own property . . . to be able to say of his home, farm or place of business "This is mine."

The right to own property . . . to enjoy the rewards of one's own labors . . . has been a stimulus to our country's inventive genius and has played an important part in its tremendous progress and development.

America's roots are anchored in this inalienable right—the right to own property . . . another of the things that makes America great.
