Polio Returns Are Lagging

(Continued from page 1) Mrs. Ankney, a WAVE officer during World War II, has avowed that she will be a constant booster of the Foundation in the years ahead.

A dance at the American Legion club Saturday evening netted $50 for the march of dimes fund, Commander John Stuijbergen announced.

Scientists are now at the threshold of developing an effective vaccine against polio, Chancellor R. G. Gustavson, of the University of Nebraska, state march of dimes chairman, reports.

He said experiments at several research centers, financed by money contributed through the march of dimes, have been reasonably successful in developing immunity in laboratory animals against the disease.

Next year, the chancellor said, the vaccine may be perfected to a state where it can be used upon human beings for the first time. The difficulty of developing a vaccine, Doctor Gustavson said, has been compounded because not one but four viruses commonly cause polio. Viruses are invisible substances which can be seen only through powerful electro-microscopes.

Doctor Gustavson said the search for a vaccine is one phase of a two-pronged research program being sponsored by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. The second phase is concerned with developing better ways to treat patients who are victimhood by the disease. "Research has brought us nearer to victory over polio," Dr. Gustavson said. "Yet, while the work goes forward, polio is striking both children and grownups more severely each year. We simply can't quit the fight now."

"I hope every Nebraskan will give generously to the march of dimes campaign now in progress. The march of dimes is private enterprise at its best. It is a wonderful spontaneous program which does not depend upon Washington bureaus and more taxes to support its program."

Half of all funds subscribed remain with the county for emergency aid. The other half is spent to fight epidemics and carry on the research.
