Help from Outside Promoter Not Needed When Time Came for O'Neill's 'New' Hotel

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS

LINCOLN — Mayor D. A. Doyle, Councilmen Brennan, Fallon, and Cowperthwaite, S. J. Weeks, J. P. Mellor and a few others representing the business interests of the town sat during an evening in the long ago with 2 representatives of the press in a room over the Gallagher store. It was not an official meeting of the city council. Rather these men, officials and private citizens, had met to entertain a proposition for a new hotel to be a professional promoter.

Romaine Saunders

There was felt a need in the community for a modern fireproof hotel. In short, the proposition from the gentleman who had landed in town only that day was for O'Neill business concerns to put up the cash and he would go ahead with the building program. Those men in that meeting had heard of such things before.

Mr. Weeks took the floor and gave the promoter to understand that if O'Neill citizens were furnishing the money they could look after the building without outside help.

Tom Golden, who was also at the meeting said nothing. His answer stands today on the corner of Fourth and Douglas streets.

During the excavating and putting in of foundations Mr. Golden was down there in the basement among the workmen. He would gather up a handful of the sand and gravel which forms the underground deposits of much of the country north of the Elkhorn, examine the structure and in the end directed that it be used in the concrete work of the building.

He said to me one day as we watched the program of basement digging and pouring of concrete, "Fifty years from now the material right here at hand will be used for building and those that follow us will wonder why we sent away for building material."

Golden was an early riser. Soon after daybreak he might be seen coming down the hill from his home on "Kid Hill" and he was the first office man to be in his office anywhere in town. What was open prairie between "down town" and the crest of the rise in the ground dignified by being called a hill is now cluttered with houses.

The Golden hotel, modern and fireproof, was the second building in the town to reach up above 2 stories. The first was the frame building on lower Fourth street known as the Evans, then later the Potter house. It burned to the ground one windy day in summer and left Ed Evans, owner and proprietor broke.

The Golden is efficiently managed by a son of the builder, M. J. Golden.

Every 2 minutes some patriot in the USA becomes insane over it all. Every 35 minutes there is a suicide, a leap from the high bridge into the cold waters of San Francisco bay, too many sleeping pills or anything that will bring the end to life's fitful dream. Radiant sunlight, starless to mention that nearly a half-century ago in the days of hand set type Miss McLaughlin was a compositor with The Frontier force that turned out the weekly edition. She had a sister performing the same functions for the Independent. Merritt Martin, whose death is also recorded, was one of a lively but exemplary group of young Methodists a half-century ago that functioned in the religious social and cultural life of O'Neill.

It is too bad that an otherwise jolly gentleman should become a pathetic figure by being the husband of a queen.

The dog population of the country is said to be 29 million. Active volcanoes now number 450. There is estimated to be more plant and animal life in the oceans than on the entire land area of the world. A basket of food which cost $10 in 1939 now costs $23.44. Scrapped car collection in 1951 totaled 3 million, the average age a little more than 7 years. A Lincoln couple who own a small home and work to earn the money to maintain it find their entire tax and insurance load this year to be nearly $1,000, $600 of which is for federal income tax. Another highbrow comes to town to tell us the Muscovite setup is to force a new civilization in our part of the world. Thought we already had it.

With dope to sell representatives of certain interests have come to Nebraska to fluorinize our water supply, saying it will kill germs. No doubt. And it kills animal life. A recent discovery reported gives us to understand that 1 spoonful of human tears will correct anything suspicious in 100 gallons of water. We have given 200 barrels of human blood; now how many will come forward with their teardrops to "fluorinize" the wells? Not one cent of cost to harassed taxpayers. But I trust that the gusher in front of Blake Ott's filling station down there at Amelia will be spared the defilement even of our tears.

After a sundrenched yesterday, this last morning in February we awoke to a landscape spread over with a 3-inch blanket of moist snow, nature's gift to earth for renewal of fertility that does more to stimulate growth in the vegetable world than all the efforts of man with artificial means of fertilizing. It is said if you are past 40 don't shovel snow. All right—let it lay.

Lee Rankin, a Lincoln attorney, flew to the home of his parents in south central South Dakota last week. He reports 2 feet of snow on the level, roads closed and settlers in that territory completely isolated. His father has been unable to get to town or receive mail since December 25. Ranchers have sustained losses among their herds and provisions were running low in some households. Efforts were being made to open the roads but Mr. Rankin thinks there can not be any extensive travel until the spring thawup.

With the population of the earth increasing at the rate of 75,000 a day maybe there is something to this idea of birth control. Some are frightened at the mention of such a thing supposing it means murder, whereas it seems to imply, don't get something started.

Dick Ernst called on Garry Brewster on Sunday, March 2.
