Prairieland Talk —

Slayer Must Be Dealt with by Law According to Enormity of Crime

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS

LINCOLN — A professional group appearing on the scene in recent years under the honored title of doctors are perhaps unintentionally making it possible for one charged with the crime of murder to escape the gallows.

These men are concerned as to the why one individual is moved to slay another. The safeguard of society does not rest upon the motive for a crime but that the criminal be hunted down and dealt with on the basis of the enormity of the crime.

I fancy O'Neill citizens are not in a mood to regard the bullet-riddled body of Chet Calkins as the act of a mere crazy gent that ought to be put in the bug house. And maybe in a few years to come out "cured" to spot another victim.

Mental experts are the chief reliance of the defense attorney. They but that is not to save the life of one who has forfeited his right to life when guilty of a revolting crime.

Wanted—Mouse traps to set; fee 25 cents each trap; guaranteed to catch the mouse when sprung. Soon such a want ad may appear in the classified columns. As yet it is an undeveloped industry. But a Lincoln girl rified at sight of a mouse is common belief. The trap may also have some terrors for them.

At any rate, one lady in my neighborhood wanted a trap set for a mouse, so she engaged the services of a neighbor to come to her home and set the trap. When the trap was properly set ready for the victim the lady asked what she owed the man. "Twenty-five cents," was his unblushing demand, and the two bits that, in the same neighborhood was handed over. Now it chances is a young mother with a new-born baby. On the days one of her neighbor friends bakes she comes in with a pie or a loaf of bread and on wash day gets soiled things from the young mother's home and puts them through the machine with her own washing. Comparisons are said to be odious. But there it is—the one symbol of neighborly thoughtfulness and helpful ministry; the other a symbol of a class that forever wants to know, "How much is there in it?"

A Lincoln lady says when she went to the internal revenue collectors office to turn in her income tax payment the functionary presiding intimated that she was a crook trying to cheat the government. She could have retorted by saying, "And who has set the example?" The dark shadows of official scandal have not spared the internal revenue bureau.

Two women stood on the corner talking as I came up to get on a bus. One a matron, the other a young woman, crippled and leaning on crutches. She said something about her mother from which I gathered that the mother was an invalid, and just before she hobbled away on crutches she said to the other woman, "I must get out and make my living." And then she was on her way to see about a job. That young woman has courage, the courage born of native fortitude that will see her through. With broken body, denied the opportunity of other sound and whole young women for a husband, a home and children, she is a symbol of those everywhere who face life on uneven terms and cheerfully go in to it asking no odds of anyone—the heroes throughout the land on crutches.

Henry Hawk, for some years held in the state prison on conviction of being responsible for a death, and who repeatedly sought release through habeas corpus in the courts and finally to the federal district court, was successful in the federal district court at Omaha. Judge J. A. Donohoe heard the plea of habeas corpus and ruled in favor of Hawk. Judge Donohoe was critical of the proceedings before the trial court and takes his stand with a famous lawyer and at one time a member of the president's cabinet that it is the duty of the state's attorney to clear the innocent as much as it is a duty to convict the guilty. Whether Hawk now will be drawn through the sweat of another court appeal remains to be seen. If so, let it be done in the interests of justice rather than to vindicate the prosecution.

Grey, wrinkled, skin sagging under the chin, a quartet of the nation's officials are pictured ready to make their plea to congress for no reduction in appropriations for foreign aid, alleging that "a substantial cut would gravely impair our own security." Just how this is has not been explained. Our national safety, our security, our future depending on government handouts to decrepit, broken down nations of the old world? Come now, honored sirs, are we so helpless that we must resort to bribery to save our skins!

The Nebraska Library commission has asked a department for the blind. Now in addition to the 600,000 books on the commission's library shelves an apartment in the basement of the capitol building has been taken over for reading material for the blind in Braille and "talking" material in the form of records. This material is supplied by the Library of Congress at no cost to the state, and covers a variety of subjects with some works of fiction. The Library of Congress also furnishes free to the blind the instrument to play these records. Miss Nixon, the executive secretary of the commission, in showing me this large selection for the blind, both in Braille and the records, said the blind living in the state are availing themselves of this service. As additional records are sent from Washington from time to time those who receive this material from the commission are allowed to keep it indefinitely and the instrument or recording is theirs as long as they care to keep it. Material for the blind goes through the mails free. Miss Nixon explained, but additional help is required in the commission's headquarters in the state house to supervise the blind department.

Today's Crisis Demands ACTION!

That's Why Nebraska Should Elect

VAL PETERSON

- ... to get rid of part time representation in the senate
- ... to get rid of a "let-John-do-it" attitude
- ... to give Nebraska a full-time, everyday voice in the Senate that will be heard and respected

Peterson is opposed to Universal Military Training

Compare Peterson's Record

Peterson doesn't talk about economy while sponsoring special interest spending. He economizes! No other state takes a smaller percentage of its citizens' income for state government.

Peterson is not content to let others carry the load of exposing fraud and corruption. He militantly backed the drive which put organized gambling out of business in Nebraska.

Peterson has been a powerful figure in promoting more irrigation water, a halt to floods, more and cheaper power and many other benefits for Nebraska and Nebraska agriculture. He has taken the lead in seeking to protect local control of our resources.

Nebraska Must Have a FULL TIME SENATOR

Part time representation is not good enough for Nebraskans. This state deserves a Senator who is willing and able to answer ALL roll calls . . . who can command attention and respect . . . who will not be a part time Senator.
