Senator Burney Says Highway Situation 'Grave' in Nebraska

Road problems in Nebraska were talked and a discussion of the state sales tax proposal was held during the business meet-ing of the North-Central Nebraska District Press association session Saturday at O'Neill's Town House.

State Sen. Dwight Burney of Hartington, a perennial sales tax advocate who is accustomed to seeing his pet die in Nebraska's unicameral legislature, was principal speaker. He told 70 editors, property tax field. Burney is a member of the emergency highway committee. Currently he is prodding the highway department for more weighing stations, including one at O'Neill.

Nebraska publicists have always taken pride in the fact that Nebraska has no state sales tax or state income tax.

Also on the program was Cliff Sandahl, editor of The North Platte Telegraph - Bulletin and founder of the Nebraska Editor's Highway association-an emergency group formed to help solve a deteriorating highway sit uation in the state.

Ray Dover, editor-publisher of the Valentine Republican, offered a resolution that was adopted
