Bertie Proposes American Party

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS

LINCOLN—Confusion occasioned by presidential primaries multiplies. Groups are forming for write-in campaigns. Democrats with whom Stevenson is not acceptable are starting a country-wide movement to put Kefauver in the White House by means of the write-in. A militant suffragette in our capital city is promoting a movement to write-in General MacArthur's name on the November ballot and like movements have begun in other states.

Romaine Saunders

The fighting Colonel McCormick of the world-known Chicago Tribune proposes a new political organization to be known as the American party. His caustic remarks are at least interesting.

"I swallowed Willie in '40," he says. "Dewey in '44 and '48 . . . but now that the democrats have taken over our party by voting in republican primaries by the ruse of falsehood and corruption . . . I will be imposed upon no longer."

But he did not let up until he had said every patriot should vote for Sen. Hugh Butler of Nebraska and Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin. Every presidential campaign produces a number of insurgents that in the end have got nothing and the doubt the stalwarts will continue to vote their party ticket.

A 14-year-old boy, in competition with artists and designers all over the world 50 years ago, designed the Australian flag and won the $500 offered by the boy's country for the best design. The flag has the British Union Jack in the upper left hand corner and the stars of the southern cross to represent the six colonies that became united under one government. . . . Had the Nebraska guardsman murdered in a Wisconsin city been at prayer meeting that night in place of going to the rounds of the synagogues of satin he would still live. . . . Old Asia is in the path of the crimson tide with headquarters in Moscow. An observer writing of the situation in Indochina gives these ominous words: "On times answer hangs the fate of this former French colony, perhaps the world." . . . There are many houses with gleaming white paint. I was born in one such and now abide behind clean white walls, but there is only one White House and most printers and writers capitalize this center of federal plans and intrigue. There are many hotels but only one Cornhusker.

The state legislature convened at noon Wednesday, August 27, in special session at the call of Governor Peterson to consider four proposals, indemnity for hog losses, refund of six million dollars collected under the blanket school tax levy which the supreme court ruled unconstitutional in a case brought from Holt county. Five a month, enough for a few sandwiches, added to old age assistance payments is another item on the agenda. Something about outlawing feeding of "uncooked garbage" to livestock. This makes the second call to a special session for the members composing the present state legislature. Some patriots urged including state highway building in the call but the governor has sidetracked that much mooted question. Maybe those interested in school tax refund would favor turning it all over to the road building needs.

What is this thing that invades households known as "extreme cruelty" and wrecks homes? More redskins hit the dust before the deadly aim of Buffalo Bill than for any other reason and after a lifetime under the vicitudes of a plainsman, Cody came up with a charge of extreme cruelty and got a divorce from Mrs. Cody. On her part she was found "cruel" because she had become fed up with Bill coming in drunk with drunken pals and messing up the beds and defiling things in general. Maybe that's what long suffering wives mean when they set forth the claim of "extreme cruelty" in a petition for divorce. 'Tis said not until Hymen brought his love delighted hour there dwelt no joy in Eden's holy bower. During courtship the young gent is always hanging around, but when "love's delighted hour" has been consummated, abandonment, extreme cruelty and other unbearable traits wreck the peace and happiness of too many American homes. . . .

General Hershey of the selective service says one-third of draft age boys are unfit mentally, physically and morally for military service. That's probably all right with the boys . . . 96 million patriots have gone to the top of Washington monument to get the birds-eye view of the city . . . Every man, woman, boy or girl who drives an automobile on streets and highways is an outlaw in Nebraska under our present traffic laws . . . Is this the day spoken of by Daniel the prophet when "many shall run to and fro"? Folks are getting around. Some of my tribal group have been to Cuba, others to Niagara Falls and Canada, still others to New York City and up into New England. We once felt that we had been places if we got 20 miles from home. . . . If interested, you'll have 10 more days duck hunting this fall. . . .

Two young men were up against it for funds to continue as students at the noted university of Palo Alto, Calif. An idea gave them a hunch. They made a deal whereby Paderewski, the great piano player, would give a concert. They offered him $2,000 to come, anticipating the sale of enough tickets to leave a profit sufficient to enable them to stay on as students. The concert over and cash counted the receipts had amounted to $1,600. The boys went to the great Polish musician with the $1,600 and a note for $400, explained the situation, whereupon Paderewski tore up the note and returned the cash to the boys. They were starting in Poland. Paderewski was distressed for his countrymen. An American went to him with the needed relief. That American was Herbert Hoover, one of those two boys from the university of Palo Alto. . . .

What are the functions of the "price stabilizer"? Maybe he takes over the prerogatives of the law of supply and demand. . . .

Away they go to distant climes to find health and length of days, the while Nebraska has it all—its nectar of the sands, its sweep of uncrowded prairie, its life giving ozone, the green beneath and the blue above, environment that renders life unhurried, sunshine and sweeping winds mix the life-giving elements and if you escape the highway crashes your chances are even to match the years of Betsy Baker down at Tecumseh who has attained the age of 110 years. . . .

Five men representing a group of churches are providing food and clothing for otherwise destitute citizens in the villages of northwest Greece. A million pounds of food stuff from United States ports lately sailed for famine sufferers in India. Enemy or friend, we will feed them if hungry. . . .

"Better Nebraska" association must have money to blow in, indicated by a two-page ad in a recent Sunday paper. Better Nebraska—what's the matter with Nebraska as is? Shut off the busy bodies and give us a rest. Roads, sales tax, watershed stuff, conservation, special schools for this and that—go jump in a sandhills lake you restless promoters and cool off so we have a lull to the high pressure on all sides. . . .

It doth appear that neither the FBI nor the justice department was interested in that gathering of editorial talent in O'Neill, but what an event that would have been for that inspired pagan who coined the word "blizzard." O. C. Bates, and who could beat the banjo for the beer when he was broke—in view of the part the Nebraska Brewers Foundation had in it. . . .

What you believe or don't believe is not important. The sun rises and sets just the same.

Farm Politics: 1952

Both political parties will probably be talking a cautious middle-of-the-road program in the 1952 elections. . . .

No single farm question appears to be of overriding importance in this year's political scene, according to the August issue of Successful Farming magazine. Earlier this year, it appeared that price controls might be the chief issue in the election. The fact that most prices are still running below ceilings has caused the issue to fade into the political background. . . .

The democrats won many farmer votes in the 1948 elections over the issue of government-owned grain-storage facilities. Republican congressmen had killed a provision for building or buying new government bins. Although storage space was not a vital factor in making the 1948 corn loan effective, President Truman and Secretary Brannan made it appear that the republicans were attempting to sabotage the whole program. . . .

This year, the republicans are being careful not to get in such an embarrassing situation. A 10-state conference of republican farm leaders issued a statement of policy for the guidance of the GOP convention on a farm plank. It marked out no new ground in farm policy. In fact, it was an indirect endorsement of most of the programs now in effect. . . .

The attempt to win the farm vote by republicans and democrats will probably fall into two categories. The democratic strategy will be a "look at the record" of farm prosperity, rather than any attempt to push forward any new programs. . . .

You can expect to hear much ado about the rise in farm prosperity from democratic campaigners. They'll claim government farm programs are the happy cause of farm prosperity. They will NOT refer to the underlying cause of the prosperity, World War II, the Korean conflict and heavy armament production. . . .

The republicans, on the other hand, can be counted on to emphasize the role of general business improvement in creating American farm prosperity. . . .

How Is Your Child's Health?

It is school time again. Has your family planned to have each child ready for school by having a medical check-up and having any remediable defects corrected? Has the family planned to have the immunizations necessary for protection against diphtheria, smallpox, tetanus, and whooping cough? . . .

Does your family continue to plan for meeting the emotional needs of children through maintaining certain conditions in the home which help the child to grow up and develop in his own best way? . . .

One of these conditions is to give the child the security that comes from feeling that he is loved and accepted. Studies have shown the great importance of parents' affection. . . .

Other conditions to plan for are experiences through which children may gain the self-esteem that develops from being "able to do." From the earliest years, children should be given responsibility for doing things for themselves and others. . . .

Two extremes should be avoided: burdening a child with home duties too heavy for him, and making him over-dependent upon his parents. Studies have shown that carefully safe-guarded part-time work by children, as a part of an educational program, contributes to the emotional growth of youth. . . .

Moral Standards Improved

We recently read that a speaker in another city suggests that unless the United States "awakens to the dangers of its moral turpitude, all the armies, navies and airplanes in the world cannot save us." He expressed the view that "evil forces within our own nation" are destroying "the very fabric of our Christian civilization." . . .

Despite the incidents cited by the speaker, we question his conclusions, both as to moral turpitude in this country and as to the power of evil forces within the nation. Admittedly, there are investigations and our streets and highways are dangerous and hazardous for various reasons, including motor vehicular traffic. These things do not indicate, however, that the majority of the people of the United States have gone to the dogs or that they are without moral conscience and spiritual guidance. . . .

The trouble with speakers, like the gentleman quoted above, is that they attempt to compare existing conditions in the United States with a perfect world. If they knew enough about other countries and other people to compare the people of this country with those living elsewhere in the world, they would probably be astonished at the goodness of the average American. Certainly, the present generation is an improvement over previous generations and the standard of morals, in the broad and narrow sense, has improved along with the standard of living—at least we think so. . . .

Modern definition: Soft snap—the job that belongs to somebody else. . . .

Leaders get credit for the work that they can persuade others to do. . . .
