12 Truck Scales Will Be Erected

Junction of Highways 20-275 a Site

Sen. Dwight Burney of Hartington has emerged the winner of a running scrap with the state highway department. The triumph will result in a truck weighing station near O'Neill plus 11 others.

Burney was the sponsor of a bill in the 1951 legislature to provide 12 more truck scales along the state's highways. The idea was to curb overloading of what Gov. Val Peterson refers to as "the rubber-tired boxcars." The bill was passed but the scales were not built. Highway department sources say this was because the legislature failed to provide a specific appropriation. Burney retorted that the department is given a lump sum and it's up to State Engineer Aitken how to spend it.

At any rate the scale sites are now definite and the machines will be in operation next May, more than two years after Burney thought he had the job done.

Two stations now are in operation at North Platte and Holdrege. They cost about $30,000 each to build, Res said, but he added that the remaining 10 will not be that expensive.

Res announced the following "definite sites":

Thirteen miles east of O'Neill, at the junction of U.S. 20 and 175.

At Culbertson, at the junction of U.S. 26N and state 19.

Columbus, at the south junction of U.S. 30 and 81.

Three miles north of Laurel at the junction of state 15 and U.S. 20.

North of Fremont, at the junction of state 91 and U.S. 77.

One and a half miles south of Hebron on state 3 and U.S. 81.

About one mile east of Waverly on U.S. 6.

Already under construction.

are stations three miles north of Plattsmouth on U.S. 73 and 75 and northeast of Wahoo at the junction of state 109, U.S. 77 and U.S. 30A.
