

Atkinson's 'Miss R. M.' Sends Her Favorite Sweet Pickle Recipe

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

September practically gone and the kids are getting tired of those everlasting peanut butter, cheese and commercial salad dressing sandwich fillings for their sandwiches. Why not send them something else for a change? This is fine—

EGG AND FRANKFURTER FILLING

(For Sandwiches)
Two hard cooked eggs (chopped), two cooked frankfurters (ground), one cup celery (finely cut), one teaspoon salt, 1/3 cup salad dressing. Mix all together thoroughly and chill. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

The kids will like this one: It's made with carrots, raisins and peanuts and it's different. Grind together coarsely, one cup raw carrots, one cup salted peanuts, one cup seedless raisins. Add 1/2 teaspoon salt, two teaspoons lemon juice, two tablespoons mayonnaise. Mix well and store in refrigerator. Makes 10 sandwiches.

Or you can do this: You can grind together finely 1/2 cup salted peanuts and one cup carrots. Combine with three tablespoons mayonnaise and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Use on whole wheat or rye bread. Makes four sandwiches.

EGG AND CELERY SANDWICH FILLING

Three hard cooked eggs, 1/2 cup finely cut celery, mayonnaise or sandwich spread. Moisten finely chopped, hard cooked eggs and celery with prepared sandwich spread or mayonnaise. Spread on buttered, enriched white bread. Makes four sandwiches.

Atkinson Miss Wins Subscription—Dear Blanche:

I've been meaning to write you a letter for some time but this summer flew by so fast that I just didn't have the time before. It doesn't seem possible that school is here again. This is a busy time for mothers since they have to plan appetizing lunches daily.

Have you ever tried mixing jelly with peanut butter to put into sandwiches? It's something different and really delicious.

We've been doing quite a bit of canning around our house lately. Mom and I want to put up some grape and plum jelly next week.

Today we're canning cucumber pickles. I am sending along my favorite sweet pickle recipe. The reason I like it so much is that your pickles stay crisp and always turn out good.

CRISP CHUNK STYLE PICKLES

Select about 50 medium sized cucumbers and cover with brine made in proportion of two cups of salt to 4 1/2 quarts of cold water. Allow cucumbers to stand in brine three days, drain and let stand in clear water three days, changing water each day. Cut cucumbers in one-inch chunks, add three pints equal parts vinegar and water for seven pounds of chunks—or enough to cover thoroughly. Add one tablespoon of powdered alum and simmer two hours. Do not boil. Drain cucumbers and save the vinegar solution in which they were simmered. To this solution, add seven cups white sugar, two tablespoons broken stick cinnamon and two tablespoons of celery seed. Boil this mixture five minutes. Pack pickles into sterilized jars, pour boiling syrup over them and seal at once. Makes 12 to 15 pints.

In Persia, long ago, it was considered an insult to the host if a guest cut his bread. It was properly broken off with the hands. Often, now, we break off big chunks of French bread. But we like our bread sliced and ready to use from the bakers.

Loud horn blasts nowadays usually mean that there is a traffic tie up. But in the 14th century, the horn was awaited in anticipation. Bakers would announce their bread was ready for sale with the blast of their horns.

Allen Noted for 15-Hour Speech Gained Fame Fighting Silver Repeal

William V. Allen, Nebraska's first and only populist U.S. senator, was a key figure in the nation's politics during the early 1890's.

Born in Midway, O., January 28, 1847, he removed to Iowa with his family at the age of 10. He attended Upper Iowa university for a while and then served in the Civil war. After the war, he read law, was admitted to the bar, and practiced in Iowa until 1884 when he came out to Nebraska.

Locating in Madison, he continued the practice of law and plunged actively into politics. He was elected chairman of the Madison county republican convention two years after his arrival in Nebraska. Like many another Nebraska republican, Mr. Allen was swept up by the tide of populism which rolled across the state in the early nineties. In 1891 he was elected judge of the district court, Ninth district, on the people's independent ticket.

Allen's election to the senate in 1893 came after a large and distinguished group of candidates—including such men as J. Sterling Morton, James E. Boyd, John M. Thurston and A. S. Paddock—had run their course before a legislature in which populists and republicans were evenly divided, giving the balance of power to a democratic minority.

It looked for a while as though the republicans might unite with the democrats and select J. Sterling Morton. When this failed—largely through the efforts of Edward Rosewater of the Omaha Bee, who wanted no part of Morton—the democrats joined with the populists on the 18th ballot to elect Judge Allen.

As the representative of a new party which had made great inroads against the strength of the old parties, Senator Allen naturally was a conspicuous figure in Washington. He is perhaps best known for his 15-hour speech against silver repeal.

By 1896, Senator Allen was being mentioned as a strong candidate for the populist nomination for the presidency. Instead of becoming its candidate, he presided over the national convention of the people's independent party in St. Louis, Mo., which ratified the nomination of his (Allen's) old friend, William Jennings Bryan, by the democrats.

Senator Allen was defeated by M. L. Hayward of Nebraska City when he came up for reelection in 1899. Senator Hayward died before he could qualify and Governor Poynter appointed Mr. Allen to fill out the remainder of the term.

Following his retirement from the senate in 1901, Mr. Allen returned to Madison and the practice of law. He was elected judge of the district court in 1916 and again in 1920. He died in 1924.
