The stuffing can be done the day before if the turkey can be stored in a really cool place. If it can't be, then don't risk it.

When roasting the turkey, I like to cover the entire bird with a strip of white cloth dipped in melted fat. Brush the bird with melted fat before putting it in the oven, even when you use the cloth over it. Be sure that the turkey is back at room temperature before putting it in the oven, or you will have to allow extra time for roasting.

You can remove the white cloth that was dipped in melted fat toward the end of the cooking period, and the skin will be beautifully browned at serving time.

Buyers Still Wanting Calves

 There'll be about four hundred head of good yearling steers in today's offering at the O'Neill Livestock Market. These will be from about three consignors. These steers will weigh from 850 pounds down to about 650 pounds. There'll be 400 to 500 calves and buyers are still looking for those calves, although the runs seem to be tapering off. Of course, there will be the usual run of butcher cattle.

• The hog sale will start as usual at 12 o'clock noon. Each week more feeder pigs are appearing on the O'Neill market.
