Phone Firm Files New Application

Northwestern Bell Telephone company Monday filed a new application for increased rates with the Nebraska state railway commission. The application includes proposed increases averaging about 2 cents per day for residence telephones and about 3 cents per day for business telephones with certain adjustments in long distance rates.

In commenting on the filing, L. O. Arstad, general manager, said: "The commission's recent dismissal of our previous application noted that present rates had not been in effect a reasonable period of time. It also indicated that the company should have filed a proposed schedule of rates."

Present rates were based on a test period ending September 30, 1951. Well over a year has now elapsed since then. Our new application spells out specific schedules of proposed rates which would produce increased monthly revenues of $139,300 or $64,500 per month of net earnings after taxes."
