Mock Broadcast Features Meeting

CHAMBERS—On Wednesday, December 3, the Chambers Garden club held its annual Christmas party at the home of Jennie Gillette, with Mildred Wandersee and Jessie Kiltz as assistant hostesses. A potluck dinner started the party, places being found at the long table and four card tables by matching parts of Christmas cards.

Following the meal, a business session was held, roll call being answered by naming Christmas symbols. It was decided to bring 10 cents to each meeting in the future, the money to be added to the treasury. The two hostesses will furnish the door prizes. It was also decided to send a gift to Gleason Grimes, now in Clarkston hospital, Omaha.

Immediately after the business meeting, Betty Mitchell, announcer for "radio station CGC," introduced the Tat and Tattle quartette, which led the group in singing "Jingle Bells." As an additional part of this special Christmas program, Lily Sexton gave a reading. Then the Clickety Clackety entertaining group, which had been delayed in Chambers by the condition of the roads, put on a short play, Susie Shuffle, embarrassed almost to tears, gave a recitation and helpful homemaker hints appropriate to the season were given by station "CGC's" special home helper. When the "radio station" signed off, Santa Claus, assisted by the little Shuffle girl, distributed the gifts which appeared mysteriously beneath the tree.

The January meeting will be held Wednesday, January 7, at the home of Darlene Hoerle. Cleone Wintermute will be assistant hostess. Roll call is to be answered with garden resolutions.

O'NEILL LOCALS
