It Happened In NEBRASKA---

N.O "Wild West" movie ever showed more action than the early raffroads trying to cross Nebraska. In 1866, with the railroad already 270 miles west of Omaha, Chief Roman Nose warned the white man to go no farther. When the railroad continued, Indian bands attacked many a train-derailing some, and killing hundreds of workers. But the Iron Horse marched on.

Nebraska's taverns have made great strides since pioneer times, too. Today our taverns are clean, wholesome, law-abiding. Our tavern owners are respected citizens, doing their share to build their communities.
