State Capitol News Current Land Values Compared to 20-Year Term Thought Best Yardstick

LINCOLN—The Nebraska legislature turns its attention this week to highways, a matter pretty much crowded out of the spotlight so far by the property tax headache.

The revenue committee has held public hearings on two bills which would re-enact the 1949 revenue laws knocked out in the 1950 referendum. A poll of the committee indicates that both measures command enough votes to win their advancement to the floor of the legislature. Their fate after that isn't so certain.

The bills to raise the gas tax a penny and to raise vehicle registration fees—brought out two of the session's biggest crowds.

Highlight of the two hearings was a suggestion by the Nebraska Farm Bureau federation, spearhead of the attack on the 1949 laws, that another statewide vote be taken to test the contention of the bills' backers that the people have changed their minds since 1950 when they voted to repeal the revenue laws.

Meanwhile, the public works committee was seeking to coordinate two bills providing for a new agency to oversee the state highway department.

State GOP Chairman David T. Martin of Kearney had opposed the bill and there was some speculation at the statehouse that Crosby would refuse to sign it. But sign it he did on the very day it hit his desk.

Capitol insiders pointed out that even had the governor wanted to veto the bill, it was unlikely that he could make it stick. The measure passed with 23 votes, one more than was needed, with 16 votes against it and four members not voting. Twenty-six votes are needed to override a veto.

One senator who voted against passage of the bill told me he would switch and vote to override the governor "simply because I don't think a governor should tell us how to vote."

That's the measure allowing county boards to fix salary limits of county officials and employees. The bill had a little difficulty getting past the government committee and was in pretty wobbly shape when it reached the floor.

And at week's end, Sen. W. J. Williams of Kearney had prepared a motion to kill it and it appeared he had the votes to do the job.

Batting .500—The city of Milford batted .500 in the legislature last week. The lawmakers passed a bill to abolish the home for unwed mothers and the budget committee killed ed a bill to close the state trade school.

Sen. George Syas of Omaha was the sponsor of both measures and Governor Crosby had told the legislature in his budget message that he thought they should be closed.

Although it may take a trimming on its budget, the trade school seemed likely still to be in business when the legislature goes home.

No, Thanks—The lawmakers said, "No, thanks," to Sen. Terry Carpenter's invitation to pass Governor Crosby's budget recommendations and go home right now.

Carpenter could score up only five votes beside his own for his resolution which was made on the basis that if the governor thinks he can run the state on the budget he proposed, let him try it and if the people think the legislators haven't the intellect to pass good laws, then let's go home.

No. 42—Nebraska soon will have its 43rd legislator. Sen. Ed Lusinski of Columbus, who represents Saxe and Platte counties, has been absent since the start of this session and newspapers and voters in his district have complained bitterly about not being represented.

His resignation was expected some time this week from Omaha where he has been ill for several weeks.

Governor Crosby's office declined to indicate who is under consideration but there is considerable speculation on behalf of Robert C. Brewster of Fullerton who lost to Lusinski last November by only 89 votes.

Spanking—The teacher in Hamilton county who spanked her pupils still holds a license from the state education department.

Superintendent Freeman B. Decker who held a hearing on a parent's charge that her son was spanked until he was black and blue said he warned Mrs. Ida Bell that "the evidence indicated she was using this means of punishment more than should be necessary in a well-operated school."

Decker stressed that his failure to revoke the license, as the outraged mother had asked, "does not mean to establish any principles" in regard to spanking since each case will be decided on its own merits.

Watershed—The legislature's committee on public works has given the green light to a bill authorizing the establishment of watershed districts in Nebraska.

Stripped of most of the controversy which surrounded passage of the bill during last session, the bill drew a crowd only a fraction the size of the one which jammed the hearing room two years ago.

The bill, LB 99, is the result of a legislative council committee study and is given a better-than-even chance of passage by the legislature, although it is certain to be amended in many places.

RETURNS TO FAR EAST ATKINSON—Already having completed two tours of combat duty in Korean waters, the destroyer USS Wiltzie has returned to the Far East. Serving aboard the Wiltzie is Virgil V. Ankeny, machinist's mate third class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Ankeny of Atkinson. The Wiltzie was one of the few ships to receive hazardous duty pay for having been under enemy fire a number of days each month.

O'Neill - Spencer Star Service Dropped

50 Years Ago The Anti-Owls gave a dancing party at the rink. Miss Bee McGinnis, who is employed at the Hastings mental institution, spent the weekend here with relatives. S. D. Gallentine has been awarded the mail contract on the O'Neill-Turner mail route. The daily mail service from O'Neill by Joy, Agee, Blackbird and Meek to Turner has commenced. Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Harrington entertained 40 friends in their home. The postoffice department has issued an order discontinuing the O'Neill-Spencer mail route to go into effect February 28. Since the advent of the railroad into Boyd county very little mail has been sent by the route and its maintenance was needless expense to the department. The organized mechanics' labor union lost one member who was dissatisfied with the per diem paid carpenter's assistants, which was $2.25 per day of nine hours. Carpenters receive $3 for nine hours.

20 Years Ago Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Summers celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Giuseppe Zangara, who attempted to assassinate Pres.-Elect F. D. Roosevelt at Miami, Fla., was sentenced to 30 years in the Florida state penitentiary. Elmer Hagensick put a partition in the front of the Nebraska State bank building, which he recently purchased, and J. H. McPharlin has rented the space to move his barber shop there. The bridge tournament opened at the Golden hotel with 24 couples participating. R. B. Morrison and Clive Heckenlively won first prize for the east and the west and Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Birmingham won first prize for the north and the south.

Kindergarten Classmates Honor Departing Member—John Osenbaugh, small son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Osenbaugh, was honored in a farewell party at the C. R. Hill home Wednesday afternoon, February 18. Eleven kindergarten classmates were present.

They were Francis Grenier, Richard Hill, Johnny and Larry Osenbaugh, Dickie McKim, Clarence Farr, Ronnie and Gary Harding, Jimmy Van Every, Charles Hill and Kenneth Lieb. Mrs. Harry Petersen, their kindergarten teacher, attended the party when school was dismissed.

The afternoon was spent playing games. A gift was presented to Johnny by the group. Each of the youngsters brought a snapshot of themselves that were put into a book and given to Johnny. A lunch was served. The Osenbaugh family has moved to Burwell.
