GAS COMPANIES MERGE

The merger of Seattle Gas Company and Washington Gas and Electric Company has been approved by the Washington Public Service Commission.

This was announced in Omaha today by Harry Smith, president of Smith, Polian & Company, whose Omaha investment securities firm effected the merger.

Walter S. Byrne, president of Seattle Gas Company, is former general manager of Metropolitan Utilities District of Omaha. Mr. Byrne is expected to be elected president of the new firm, Washington Natural Gas Company. The merger is effective November 1, at which time the election will take place.

Mr. Smith, who for the past year and a half has guided the proposed merger, pointed out that the combined company, because of its larger size, will be able to secure financing at more advantageous terms and will benefit economically by avoiding operational duplications. He also said industrial expansion in the Puget Sound region should be greatly stimulated.

Shareholders of both companies will exchange for shares in the merged company on a one to one basis. The combined company will serve Seattle, Tacoma and 23 other towns in the Puget Sound area.

NEGRO EDUCATOR SHOWS THE KEY

Cleo Blackburn, for 19 years the dynamic head of Flanner House, Indianapolis Negro settlement house, has dedicated his career to helping those of marginal means take a bigger part in a bigger share of American life.

In the November Reader's Digest Stanley High says that Indianapolis' Negro slums were among the worst when Blackburn, then 26, was asked to direct Flanner house. Occupying ramshackle buildings, Flanner was inadequately staffed and financed, and did little but dispense charity.

With a $4,000 grant from the Indianapolis Foundation, Blackburn made the first complete survey of the city's Negro population and set up a new Flanner House in an abandoned factory in the poorest neighborhood.

Today Flanner House occupies four modern buildings valued at nearly $1 million, has a professional staff of 70 and an annual budget of $250,000. Its program has taught better work habits, added new skills, opened new job opportunities and helped the physically handicapped toward self-support.

By dint of thrift and hard work, Blackburn in his early years went through the Southern Christian Institute in Mississippi and later Butler University in Indiana. He won scholarships at Fisk University and elsewhere.

In 1951, Dallas, Texas businessmen approved a five-year budget of $14 million to carry out Blackburn's program of "fundamental education" for the needy.

He became president of Jarvis Christian College at Hawkins, Texas, in 1953. Flanner House and Jarvis College are "pilot projects," demonstrating Blackburn's principles. He hopes for similar demonstration centers for all people, irrespective of race.

A Timely Reminder
"Father," said young William, "I've decided to become a detective. Right now I'm practicing the art of detection. Let me give you an example. In our back yard there is a large pile of ashes. By deduction that is evidence that we've had fires going all winter." "Very good," rejoined father. "Suppose you go out and sift the evidence."

Gleam of Hope
For the first hour it was a argument, then it became a dreary monolog. The wife, not content with simply having her way, seemed bent upon reducing her husband to a state of adject submission.

The man tried several times to bring the harangue to a close, but now contented himself by interjecting at appropriate intervals a plaintive, "Yes dear—yes dear."

Plainly provoked by her husband's failure to fight back, the woman finally shouted, "You are insufferable! It will soon be impossible to live with you!"

A gleam of hope brightened the poor man's countenance. "How soon?" he inquired.

Agriculture In The Soviet Is Topic

Dr. William V. Lambert, University of Nebraska, and Dr. Gale Johnson, University of Chicago, who toured Russia this summer, will speak on "The Soviet Agricultural Economy" Wednesday evening October 26, in the University of Omaha auditorium.

The 8:15 program is the third of six lectures to be presented in the University's tenth annual World Affairs Institute. The professors' talks will coincide with the general theme of the lectures, "Since the Summit," which refers to the Geneva convention.

Lambert, Dean of the Nebraska University College of Agriculture, headed the American farm representatives who traveled about 10 thousand miles behind the Iron Curtain last July and August.

Dr. Lambert has reported that while the American farmer would appreciate the effort being made by Russia to increase its agricultural production, he would revolt at the methods and waste of manpower. The principal accomplishments of the tour according to the Nebraska expert were:

—Small penetration of the iron curtain.

—A first long look at what Russian agriculture is doing.

—Proof that Americans "can survive six weeks of Russian Meals."

Dr. Johnson is agricultural economist from Chicago University.

Hero's Treat — Hot Caramel Milk!

Home from school—and the cry all over the country is, "What's to eat?" There's something about the return to three "R's," scrimmages, and all the excitement of a new school year that creates enormous four o'clock appetites. Wise is the mother who plans the afternoon treat for simplicity, and appetite satisfaction without destroying a taste for dinner. An extra glass of Homogenized vitamin D milk fills the bill perfectly, adding important extra nutrients for this "demand" fourth meal of the day.

And it's easy to give after-school—or before-bedtime milk varied glamor with the addition of favored sweet-tooth flavors—caramel, peppermint, brown sugar. Served hot and spicy, they make a party out of every day's occasion.

Hot Caramel Milk
1/2 lb. caramels
1/2 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed
Heat milk in double boiler; add to beaten eggs slowly, stirring constantly. Cook in double boiler until heated, stirring constantly. Add brown sugar; stir. Reheat. Pour into cups and sprinkle with nutmeg. 8 servings.

Peppermint Stick Milk
1 qt. milk
1 drop red food coloring
1/2 to 1/4 cup semi hard red and white peppermint candies
Scald milk in double boiler; add mints and stir frequently until dissolved. As mints vary in sweetness, a few more or less may be needed. Add drop of food coloring; pour into cups. Garnish each cup with 1 to 2 extra mints floating on top, or serve with peppermint stick. 8 servings.

Brownie Punch
1 qt. milk
4 eggs
1/2 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed
Heat milk in double boiler; add to beaten eggs slowly, stirring constantly. Cook in double boiler until heated, stirring constantly. Add brown sugar; stir. Reheat. Pour into cups and sprinkle with nutmeg. 8 servings.
