Sunburned Skin Badly in Need of Oil Lotion

Coming back from their vacations, from their week-ends, you see them. You see them in the streets. You see them everywhere! Tanned black as a berry, or burned fiery brown!

Well, we told 'em! We told them if they didn't use some kind of sunburn lotion, some suntan oil or lotion, they'd have a long session ahead of getting the skin back in nice shape. The mahogany tan isn't any joke along about October 1. It may be great fun now in those creamy summer frocks, or white ones. But it doesn't set so well against the fall colors.

It doesn't seem such fun with the later season's décolleté. But if it's done, it's done. And the girl had better be looking around for her bleaches right away if she wants to be faded out by fall.

The burned sisters have more than the burn to correct. While they were getting that lobster tint they were also having the natural oils dried out. And unless they get busy with oil substitutes they're in for a leathery skinned time of it.

By the way, have you ever tried carbolated vaseline for a bad burn? I saw a woman one day so burned that she begged you to keep your distance. Two days later she was almost completely human looking again. Carbolated vaseline did it. There are other good sunburn remedies, too, such as equal parts of linseed oil and lime water. And good trade products, also.

Use something at once to clear up the burn—and then begin with your good cream or oil on the parched skin. If you don't believe your skin is parching for oil—just give it some and see how it drinks it up.

If you've acquired a tan, or the burn isn't all faded out yet, you'd better let eye makeup help you. That excessively tanned or burned skin has a way of draining the color from the eyes and making them look smaller. Also, if your eyes are swollen and red from beach burning, bathe them twice a day, at least, with a good eye wash.

One afternoon Arnold, aged 4, had been at the beach. When he returned he asked, "Mother, what is a bathing suit for?" I said, "Why, you couldn't go in the water without one," and he answered, "Well, it doesn't keep me dry." A. E. C.

I took my small niece to the circus, where the chameleons were of great interest to her. Upon her return home, she was describing the circus in detail to her mother. "And, mother," she explained, "there were some of the cutest little green animals—hypocrites, they were called, I think." J. G.

Lloyd, who is three years old, asked Ruth (a cousin of the same age) what she was going to be when she grew up.

Ruth replied, "I'm going to be a school teacher." "O," cried Lloyd, "I wouldn't if I were you, they don't get any pay." A. K.

AFRICANS SAY:

"Africans have much in common with us as wit and wisdom expressed in their proverbs show. It is time for us to get away from the notion that they are in an inferior and barbaric state. In more than one sense, we Americans are less civilized and more barbaric than they." — C. J. BENDER.
