"Maxie Miller Writes"

White man offers work to colored girl—Negro neighbors suspect and sneer—advise take work and "watch your step"—All white man not scoundrels—give the thing a trial, anyway.

(For advice, write to Maxie Miller, care of Literary Service Bureau, 516 Minnesota Avenue, Kansas City, Kansas. For personal reply send self addressed, stamped envelope.)

Maxie Miller: I am offered employment in an office. The prospective employer is a white man, and I am a colored girl. My neighbors who know of this offer suspect, shake their heads and say, "That man's got something up his sleeve," meaning he has improper motives. I am not afraid, for I am able to take care of myself, but I do dread the gossip of these neighbors. I need the work and ask you to advise me.

Ben Ella: You would be foolish to turn down this offer because of the attitude of your neighbors. Better give the thing a trial. All white men are not scoundrels, and this one may be honest in his intentions. Moreover, Ben Ella, we can scarcely hope to avoid the criticism and suspicions of our neighbors. Take the work; watch your step; take care of yourself, as you say you can; if danger comes you will know how to get away from it.

HEROES UNSUNG By A. E. Mann Unlettered Mothers (For The Literary Service Bureau)

Ignorance is a curse. It is an onus to be shunned. It is inexcusable where opportunities have been neglected. But it deserves intense sympathy when it is the result of sacrifice for others. And such is the case of the mother who remains in ignorance while she works for the education of her child, ren.

Sometimes the husband and father becomes ashamed of the unlettered who worked to educate his children, burden. A man reached the senate of when he was unable to bear the entire United States while his wife cared for the children. But he was ashamed of her. The children were taught to call her "Auntie" and this woman was never allowed to meet the "company," nor to eat at the table with the guests. She was servant, in the kitchen.

There have been and still are thousands of these neglected, submerged sufferers. True, they have a few sympathizers, but thousands and thousands of them endure all in silence and the world never knows what burdens they bear. True they are unlettered and thus denied the best the world offers in the way of enlightenment and culture. True few people commend their sacrifices. But, in the eyes of justice, they are heroines of the superlative sort. They will ever be unsung, until the world is more disposed toward justice and fairness. But they are deserving of the highest honors, nevertheless.

LOOKING BACK Spoiling Boys By Videtta Ish (For The Literary Service Bureau)

They were a family of farmers. The children consisted of five boys. The oldest man, 65 years of age would get up, feed the stock, make fires in his wife's room, in the kitchen and in the boys' rooms. Then he'd begin to call, "Hey, Harley, Seth, Jak, get up; it's time for breakfast."

In other days the young folk used to get up and make fires, while the older folk would take their rest. I've heard of parents who would lie in bed and drink morning coffee made by some of the young folk. But today it is so different. Boys, and girls, too, are spoiled and the parents imposed on. The old methods developed in the children more self reliance and greater concern for the welfare of parents, especially when they had passed "the great divide" of human longevity.
