KELLY MILLER SAYS

The Effect of Neutrality on the Negro and Italian Vote.

The Italo-Ethiopian conflict is likely to have important political repercussions in the United States. The administration has announced the policy of neutrality and its firm intention to steer clear of European entanglements at all hazards. An embargo has been placed on trade in war materials with either belligerent by Congress. President Roosevelt has admonished all Americans that they travel on belligerent ships at their own risk. This attitude, while impartial on its face, as between the two belligerents, in effect, works hardships on Italy alone. The Ethiopians have no ships with which to trade or on which to travel.

The situation which confronts President Roosevelt today is quite similar to that which confronted President Woodrow Wilson just before we entered the World War. President Wilson indulged in loud preachments as to neutrality, but his administration leaned backwards in the direction of the Allies as against the Central powers. Both belligerents ruthlessly violated our immemorial doctrine of the freedom of the seas which President Roosevelt has tacitly surrendered. England was far sinner than Germany in this regard. The sinking of the Lusitania with American passengers on board caused the administration to reverse its policy of neutrality and enter the war enthusiastically on the side of the Allies. President Wilson was re-elected in 1916 on the rallying cry—"he kept us out of war." But the chief glory of his reputation rests upon the fact that he plunged us into war, of which the League of Nations, his brain child, is the only redeeming aftermath. William Jennings Bryan, the peerless Commencement, then Secretary of State, resigned his portfolio because he could not agree with his chief that the sinking of the Lusitania justified plunging this nation into war. Who was right, Wilson or Bryan?

The analogy between the pre-war conditions under Woodrow Wilson and under Franklin D. Roosevelt run all but on all fours. By taking sides with the Allies against the Central powers, President Wilson alienated the political support of practically every German-American in the United States. It is perfectly natural that our foreign-born citizens will feel the call of the blood when ever their native land is imperiled. In 1918 President Wilson appealed to the nation to return the Democratic Congress in sympathy with his war policies. The nation ruthlessly ignored his partisan appeal and returned a Republican House by a large majority. There can be little doubt that the solid German vote had very much to do with this result. Had President Wilson retained his health and vigor and stood for re-election in 1920, there is little doubt that this same German vote would have persisted in its antagonistic attitude and contributed its full weight towards his defeat.

Likewise President Roosevelt in proclaiming a neutrality which works chiefly to the detriment of the Italian nation will alienate many voters of that race. The loss of political support on part of the Nationals, whose native country is involved in war, is the risk which any administration will have to run. But the high-minded patriotism which is believed to actuate President Roosevelt will not be swerved to the right nor left by such political considerations.

The Italian vote is a large and significant one, especially in the great cities on the Eastern seaboard where the President's political fortunes just now stand greatly in need of re-enforcement. The Italian vote, however, is not like the Irish which is almost unweavably attached to a single party. It is quite largely Republican, which of itself, will have no effect in relieving the blow which wholesale desertion of erstwhile adherents would deliver to the President's party.

Over against the Italian vote stands the vote of the Negro, which is much larger and much more widespread. During the Presidential election of 1932 and the Congressional elections of 1934, this vote turned towards Roosevelt and the "New Deal" in

AMONG THE MUSICIANS

Jimmie Jones, now a member of Noble Sissle's orchestra, visited with his relatives and friends here Armistice Day. The band was enroute to Minneapolis and they have been filling theater engagements on the RKO circuit. Jimmie has been playing trombone with the band, but he has now been changed to bass fiddler. So Jimmie's in the money now! and he likes his new job very much. Who wouldn't? Too bad we never have a chance to hear all of the 'big shot' bands.

We attended the Georgia Minstrel Show at the Elks, Sunday night, and we must say that was the show of shows. That was the first time we had ever seen a show staged on stage and back stage, two at the same time! Too bad that "Mutiny on the Bounty" act couldn't have happened during the intermission then no one's act would have been spoiled. We really did enjoy the show though. As a whole it was a good clean show, full of laughs, beautiful costumes, and good singing and dancing.

Stenola Williams Eubank is now singing with the Dixie Ramblers. Stenola has a very nice voice and finally decided to turn professional and quit hiding all of her talent from the public, and so she is doing very nicely.

ALTA VESTA

A GIRL'S PROBLEMS (By Videtta Ish)

Dear Alta Vesta:—Your letter made me a little sad because of reference to your mother. And what you said made me more determined to be to you all that a father can and to make up as much as I can for the loss of your mother.

It is but natural that you should wonder why your mother was taken and others left, but it is a problem no one can solve. If we believe in God, believe He loves us and is both kind and just, we will accept what He allows to come and believe that somehow it is best. There is a song that runs "Sometime, sometime we'll understand." In this there is consolation.

I appreciate the love of my dear child, and the chief aim of a father is to see his children prosper. The neutrality policy which squints towards the Ethiopians will not be distasteful to the Negro vote. While they could wish that the administration, along with the League of Nations, might have assumed a more emphatic attitude in behalf of the weak against the strong, nevertheless the administration's attitude furnishes no ground for disgruntlement.

The American Negroes are not devoted to the cause of Ethiopia with the intense racial and national spirit which the Italo-American shows towards his native land. The American Negro is attached to his distant cousin across the seas only by the indefinite bond of color and the bond of common condition which white overlordship imposes upon all of the weaker and darker breeds of men. The Ethiopian would not care to call themselves Negroes although they recognize the common tie which unites all of the non-white variety of the human race.

In various parts of the country there have been incidental clashes between Italians and Negroes over the Ethiopian situation. But such clashes are merely incidental and superficial and have no deep-seated or far-reaching significance. They are but the hasty ebullitions of these two excitable racial varieties.

There can be little doubt however, that political prudence will dictate to the President and his political backers to pay more heed to their Negro re-enforcement because of the threatened defection of the Italian vote.
