ST. JOHN CME CHURCH
The Friendly Church
Rev. T. A. Sears, pastor

The Sunday School opened the days service at St. John with a very fine attendance. Rev. Sears preached a very fine sermon at the morning service to a very appreciative audience. His message will long be remembered by those who heard him. Rev. Sears makes his messages very plain so everyone can follow him. He says he expects to make his services short so the people will not tire from a lengthy service.

During the evening hour the Sunday night, all request program and again we had a fine attendance. As Rev. Sears plans to make all the services short, we expect to increase in night services as well as morning.

We are glad to see such an increase in the general attendance as well as in the finance. It should be the duty of every member and friend of St. John to see to it that they not come short in their obligation to the Church. There is no better time to show it than now while the Trustee Rally is going on. Many have made their pledge to this drive and several have paid in full. Now, with a full spirit of cooperation, St.

THIS WEEK—
IN RELIGION AND THOUGHT
—Robert L. Moody—

Youth Way—
"Where with all shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy word." Ps. 119:9.

A very encouraging thing happened in our schools recently. Provisions have been made to allow religious instruction to be given to those students whose parents and they themselves desire such instruction.

Who knows if this is not a step toward a revival among young people. We avoid pessimism whenever possible but we must admit that many older people are so set in the downward trends that our only hope is to train youths in those principles that we hope to preserve.

Surely, if religious training is provided in schools, we should be inspired to give more in the home. Those who feel that each younger generation is desperately wicked, should realize that the only way to cleanse their way is by taking the word of God.

We hope that everyone of our children and parents will appreciate this opportunity and profit thereby. Many of our present evils will be understood and their elimination will then be left entirely to the will of the individual and society.

KOMCTAN

By KORAC
"WATCH THIS!"

"Should I go up there and kick him in the teeth?" asked Leo as a smile washed across his bronze countenance. "Just try it," suggested Records facetiously. "And see how far you'll get. Seems to me that you would look pretty with spear heads sticking out behind your shoulders."

It was a second later that Heto's words brought the nearest guards into action; leaping forward several Inca soldiers roughly held the Americans while some others bound the explorers' wrists.

"What I like about this country," said Leo as the adventurers were being led away forcibly, "is that there's never a dull moment here—plenty of action brewing every minute."

"I'm not so sure about that," speculated Records. "From the way our dear friend Heto spoke a while ago, it appears that we'll get no more excitement for a long time. He said something about a nice dark cave of the moon. Remember?"

"Is that so?" fumed Leo in a joking mood. "They can't do this to us; we'll make our own action—even in here."

"Hum," smiled Records. "What do you suggest that we do—bang our skulls against these hard black walls?"

"I've a good notion to knock their heads together—the king and his larding son."

"You can start on my guard here," replied Records. "He's pushing his darn spear a little too close to my back."

"I'll fix him," whispered Zaner with a mischievous grin. "Watch this!"
