

WHERE ROLLS THE OREGON

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM THE FAR WEST.

A Falls City Resident Tells of the Glorious West, the Discomforts of Travel, Etc.

Lakeview, Oregon, July 3, 1909.—Falls City Tribune—Dear Sir:—You will remember I told you I would try and write you when I got to Oregon.

We enjoyed a part of our trip very much and a part just the opposite. The part that we enjoyed was from Denver to Pueblo, about one-hundred miles of beautiful country, then it commenced to get very tiresome; we could see nothing from the car window but sandy, rock hills and mountains.

We hear people talk about Colorado, Utah and Nevada, well outside the two or three larger cities in the three states, I wouldn't give a dime for the balance. They seem to me like a large desert and only just once in awhile you can look down a valley from the train and see a small oasis, or two by four garden patch, with a log-cabin by its side.

We stopped over at Salt Lake but we were very much disappointed. The city was very dusty, hot and smaller than we expected. We went out to Salt Lake, or Saltair, as it is called here, in the evening. It is quite a pleasure resort, all kinds of amusements, bathing, dancing, skating and I think a merry-go-round.

Monday we started for Ogden, and Reno, which are in Nevada. Ogden is just as nice or a little nicer place to live than Salt Lake, as it isn't so dirty. Reno, Nevada, is the pleasantest town we have struck. It has a fine stream of running water through the center of the town. It has a population of 14,000 and is up-to-date in every way. We stayed there over night and the next morning started for Alturas, the end of the narrow gage, "jerk-water" road that is ten times rougher than the Missouri Pacific road in Nebraska. When we reached Alturas, California, in the evening, we were more than tired and dirty, we went to an inn to get a drink of seltzer water and all that two small glasses cost was thirty cents, and it didn't start to quench our thirst. "Old rocky jerk-water road" was out of ice water about ten o'clock that morning, so you can imagine our thirst. Alturas is a town of 1,000 and is limited to nine saloons. As it was late when we reached there we did not have time to find out much more about the town, so we retired for the night. The next morning we got up early and started for the deserted point, Lakeview, Oregon. We made the trip in an automobile, it is only sixty-three miles from Alturas, but a trifle farther than I thought it was. We enjoyed the ride and the scenery was beautiful especially along Goose Lake. I think Louie Davison especially enjoyed the auto ride as the driver placed him between two old maids, who were very talkative. The driver being very reckless Louie found himself at times in the arms of first one of these ladies and then the other. We saw many fine large fir trees and other very interesting rived at Lakeview shortly after one o'clock and was as hot as "blixen," we ate dinner at a Chinese restaurant and at that hour it tasted just fine.

I have been making a great many negatives in and around Lakeview, but hardly think I will have time to finish many postals to send to my friends, as everything is so different here than I had expected. We have seen a great deal around Lakeview the last two days, but I haven't been out to where a company is building the big reservoir for the irrigation, but they tell me it is about twenty-five or thirty miles up the big valley from here. I see only a few cherries and some apples and raspberries. The soil in the valley seems to be fertile enough to raise most anything. The climate will allow such as wheat, barley, oats, alfalfa and other hay. Farmers here raise a great many cattle and sheep, but not so many hogs. The country has been very much misrepresented as to climate and fruit. I wouldn't care to live here at all, but as to the valley land, when it has water on it will be worth what contractors have paid for it. I suppose most of the rough land could be used all right if some one could get rid of the large nigger-head rocks and smaller stones. From here we can see Mt. Chasta still covered with snow, it is about one hundred miles away.

Lakeview is a nicer place than I had expected to see, has about 1,800 people, two churches and nine too many saloons. A crop can be raised without irrigation than they are in Nebraska, and about what we would call one-half a ton. The crops are about one month

As to our contract for land here, I think we shall keep it. If we are lucky and draw some valley land we will get the worth of our money easy. Mrs. Oswald left us at Reno to go to the coast, where she will visit relatives and some friends. We will start for there about Wednesday of next week, as our tickets will take us that way on returning home. We expect to be home about July 29th. The trip out here is a very long one but we are not sorry we came as it is worth much for one to see things as they are in the different states.

Yours truly, for old Nebraska,
JOHN OSWALD.

CONGRESS CAN CHECK CRAZE.

New York Police Head Urges Home Protection Against Cocaine

New York, July 10, 1909.—Declaring that all the police heads of the country would be greatly helped if a practically prohibitive tariff was placed on foreign cocaine and internal revenue restrictions on the domestic supply of the deadly drug, Theodore A. Bingham, police commissioner of this city has today written Senator Aldrich urging that congress give this protection to American homes. The spread of the cocaine craze in New York City has become "wide spread and insidious," General Bingham points out, and already his department has listed sixty-three drug stores as suspected of extensive illicit sales to victims of this drug. If this national evil is to be checked, it is the opinion of the police head here, congress must at once follow the recommendation of the American Health League and shut off by a tariff tax the secret sources of supply from abroad by which unprincipled dispensers are at present able to evade all local laws and circulate to rapidly widening circles of drug fiends.

With this plea from New York's police head, many similar communications from local authorities who must also fight the cocaine curse are being received today by the Chairman of the senate finance committee. Philanthropic, medical and charitable organizations throughout the country are joining the American Health League to urge that this vital opportunity to guard the physical and moral welfare of every community in the land be not neglected by their representatives at Washington. The leaders of this new movement are asking every citizen who would protect his home town from the drug plague to write to Senator Lodge, who is today calling the matter to the attention of the senate.

Startling evidence of the grip which the cocaine habit has taken upon communities in every section of the continent has today been presented to congress. It is estimated that some 150,000 ounces of the powerful drug were consumed last year in this country, considerably more than half of which is known to have gone to meet the cravings of the victims of the deadly habit. Though its use is usually more or less confined to the more vicious classes, it is recorded that school children have been approached and taught to use the drug, while distinguished physicians and other professional men have fallen before its insidious powers. Almost every one of these cases, the men who pander to the drug victims have been able to conceal their source of supply by importing cocaine from London or Hamburg, it is shown.

Only a removal of the source of supply of this drug can cure its victims of the habit, medical men declare, and such a result could only be brought about by the proposed duty of $150 an ounce on foreign cocaine. Backed by the reputable physicians of the country and the fathers and mothers who seek to shield their communities from this subtle drug habit, the American Health League is today looking to congress for this particular form of real home protection.

CHILDREN RALLY FOR BIRDS.

Army of Young Americans Forming to Protect Songsters.

New York, July 19:—To enlist all American boys and girls in one great child army to guard the bird resources of their country, is the object of a campaign that has been begun in this city today. Under the direction of the National Association of Audubon societies, it is planned to try to reach every one of the twenty million school children scattered over the continent and form them into an active and united fighting force for the feathered crop guards whose butchery is threatening the agricultural wealth of coming generations. Already it is reported that the children of many states are enrolling in the ranks of this national array of boys and girls on whom the Audubon officials base their brightest hopes of future protection for the birds.

To muster the children of the south into the van guard of this boy and girl army T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the Audubon association, has today gone to Knoxville, where he will lecture to several thousand teachers at their summer school on the relation of birds to agriculture and the best methods of teaching this important subject in schools. With an endowment of $100,000, which it is hoped may be obtained from the Peabody Fund next fall, this branch of education will be pushed and extended throughout the southern states till every child in this section has become an active advocate of the proper protection of its valuable bird resources.

From Ohio it is reported today that the boys of Cincinnati are already heading an extensive child movement in that state by building 1,200 houses for the birds who sadly need their shelter in the parks. Instead of robbing birds' nests of their eggs, these boys as well as many others throughout the country are now interested in the equally interesting occupation of making and placing these bird shelters in the trees where they will be patronized by the native flocks. Such work has been done in Germany for a long time with splendid results.

On the Pacific coast and in England the children are now ready to organize for the work of guarding their birds in which their elders are actively interested. In New York state hundreds of thousands of school children are known to be eager to enlist. The boys and girls of Illinois are also reported to be preparing to make up a large section of the young army. Thousands of pamphlets showing the children the uses and habits of over sixty American bird species have been distributed in schools over the entire country by the National societies during the past year in preparation for this movement by American boys and girls. If sufficient funds become available for this educational campaign it is planned to spread the knowledge of every bird in the land in this way to every school house on the continent.

"We must depend on the little folks to take up this battle for the birds which we have waged for many years all over the country," says William Dutcher, president of the National Association of Audubon societies at its headquarters, 141 Broadway, today. "Besides the great sentimental interests which the children take in the feathered songsters of their home country, they must be taught to realize that their native land will become barren in a few generations if the insect-eating birds are not protected and increased. This is a great and vital work of national education and we hope to rally thousands of parents to its active support."

New Books at Library.

The librarian has this week prepared for use the following new books.

Library of Technology, 10 volumes. These are the international correspondent school reference books on electricity, engines, automobiles, telephones, telegraph, etc.

Great American Lawyers, edited by Lewis, 8 volumes. These biographies are so arranged as to make a history of legal profession in America. The set is carefully indexed, making it possible to find quickly any material wanted. The index also makes books of use to others than lawyers, for many of the biographies are of men of fame in other than legal ways.

Louisiana Purchase—Herma. Prevost of Tuberculosis—Newshol Rosemary—Hutiggo. Facy Drills ad Marches—Kellogg. Correct Social Usage, by eighteen authors. 2 volumes.

Teething children have more or less diarrhoea, which can be controlled by giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. All that is necessary is to give the prescribed dose after each operation of the bowels more than natural and the castor oil to cleanse the system. It is safe and sure. Sold by all druggists.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Jennie R. Pyle, Plaintiff, vs.
Edward S. Pyle, Defendant.
To Edward S. Pyle, non-resident defendant:

You are hereby notified that the plaintiff, Jennie R. Pyle, did on the 19th day of July, 1909, file her petition in the district court of Richardson County, state of Nebraska, the object and prayer of which is to obtain a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony now existing between her and you upon the grounds of desertion for more than two years continuously and for non-support during said time, and praying for a further decree giving her the custody of the two children named in her petition as the fruit of said marriage who are both minors and of tender age.

You are further notified that said plaintiff has asked in her said petition that the court grant an order of sequestration of certain real estate owned by you in Richardson County, Nebraska, to wit: part of the northeast quarter of Section 20, Town 1, Range 17, containing about twelve acres, and a final decree assigning said real estate to her for her support and that of her children and that the decree making such assignment shall stand as a conveyance of your title therein to the plaintiff, Jennie R. Pyle, and a further prayer for such other and further relief as plaintiff may be entitled to, agreeable to the equities of her case.

You are further notified that unless you plead, answer or demur to the petition of plaintiff filed in said cause on or before the 6th day of September, 1909, the same will be taken as confessed and a decree entered in favor of plaintiff accordingly.
