[Published by request.] Prohibition.

> "Do you favor prohibition?" Merry question lightly spoken; If deeper feeling touch the soul, Smiling face gives no token.

Prohibition means to strike Death to that hydra-headed foe, That is filling countless thousand homes

With darkness, gloom and woe. Your boy may be the next to fall

In the subtle templer's snare; Your heart may be the next to ache In the madness of despair,

When your hands vainly strive To shield him from that demon, Rum, Your heart will echo David's cry, Oh, Absalom, my son, my son."

Weary mothers watch their sons, Their lips too sad for smiling; Hopeless ruin for that dear one Whom the tempter is beguiling.

"A drunkard's wife, oh woe is me!" Cursed by this remorseless fiend; It makes a very brute of him

Who once was true and kind. In bitter anguish, oh, my God! I cry aloud, I plead with Thee! Annihilate this cruel monster,

Who reigns from sea to sea. "What do you gain, oh, man;" You give all that life may hold, Love, hope, eternal life, For a cup of poison sold.

Sold is manhood's honor, Oh man, the crime is thine: The blood of breaking hearts

You wreck our lives, oh saloon-keeper Our blood shall stain your path, Our children's sobs curse you deeper Than a strong man in his wrath.

You drain in the glass of wine.

> No trustworthy data can be expected from the questions concerning mortgages in the cansus enumerators' schedule. In the first place the amount of indebtedness was not ascertained. Only the bare DENTISTRY fact whether a mortgage existed was recorded. In the next place, the census takers did not press too closely the in-vitation to disclose one's private financial affairs and the question was often ignor-ed. As to the truthfulness of our countrymen, we think that the unmemorial example of the boy George Washington, has made them quite as veracious, we suppose, as others. - Bank Reporter .

Sightseers in St. Louis always take a lively interest in the monster trip-hammers used in the various large iron works, which, although as large as anything of the kind to be found within the limits of the United States, are but pigmies when compared with those used in the great rolling mills and gun factories of Europe. At the Terni works in Italy there is a hammer which weighs fifty tons. It was cast in 1873, and is said to have taken ninety days to cool sufficiently to admit of being set in position. Alexandrovski, Russia, has one ten tons heavier that was cast in 1874. At the Crenstot works in France there is one of eighty tons. It was made in 1877 and sets on an anvil block of 160 tons weight. The Cockerville works in Belgium have a 100-ton hammer, and the Krupp gun works at Essen, Germany, have one of 150 tons. The last named hammer is the largest now used in the world .- Ex.
