An honest man is truly a good thing for his creditors.

The wind does not whistle through the barn that is full of wheat.

General Kuropatkin says he did not lose a gun during the retreat. Apparently he lost some 17,000 men.

A Chicago scientist insists that he secured milk with formaldehyde traces direct from a cow. That seems like an utter impossibility.

Similia similibus curantur. The town of Tornado, Tex., has been wiped out by a tornado. It's safe to gamble that the town is cured of its name.

The police say that the women's fashion of carrying handbags is responsible for the many holdups. As in the days of Adam—the woman is to blame.

Lipton is bound to prove that Great Britain can beat the United States at the yachting game, even if he has to get an American designer to build the boat to do it.

The man who says "Oh, fudge" when he feels profane may be a better example to the children, but somehow it doesn't seem that he would be as much of a protection against burglars in the night.

The divine who stamps his letters "Not to travel on Sunday" can have his request carried out by mailing his epistles early enough in the week so they will reach their destinations by Saturday night.

Bow-legged men are to be discriminated against by army recruiting officers hereafter. The average bow-legged man will be unable to see wherein the knock-kneed man has any natural advantage over him.

A minister in Michigan has solved the "yellow peril" very satisfactorily. He says: "If Japan wins, it will mark the first step toward Anglo-Saxon supremacy of the world. Japan will lead China, Britain will lead Japan and America will lead Britain. The rest of Europe will follow easily."

In looking over the effects of a Massachusetts millionaire recently, his executors, who had handled vast sums until they grew to seem rather commonplace, "discovered personal property, hitherto unknown, to the amount of a million and a half." The incident helps one to realize how large a large fortune is. And yet the emotions of these executors were only such as poor folk may experience. Who has not known the joyful surprise of finding a dime or a nickel in an unused pocket?

The events of the present war in the far East have shown that the Japanese—known to the nations of the world as "the little brown men"—are the equals of any other soldiers on the globe, whether the test has been one of bravery, endurance or accuracy in firing. The severest tests of modern warfare have been repeatedly, for months past, applied to these small soldiers of the Orient. Pitted against soldiers of large size and boasted endurance, they have emerged from the smoke of conflict in every instance, whether on sea or land, victoriously.

It is certain that the schools are peculiarly the victims of the faddists. A few years ago all our educational authorities went daft on the subject of vertical handwriting. It never occurred to them to find out whether the merchants who hire bookkeepers approved of this style of writing. There was no thought of the individuality of the child of which ordinarily the handwriting is supposed to be the expression. So the vertical style was adopted. Now we are informed that it is being abandoned because the men with jobs to give will not tolerate it. This is but one illustration.

The growth of the American navy has been unprecedented in the annals of the world. It is a good navy, consisting of stout ships manned by able men and intelligently directed, but some of the naval officers and officials of the Navy Department are beginning to ask what good it is to build the ships if there are no men to man them. Their queries are not unreasonable. There is not a ship in the navy that is not short of men and officers, and in order to overcome this lack some ten or more vessels which are in need of some repairs will be put out of commission for the time being, not because the repairs are so serious as to call for this step, but simply because of the shortage of the men behind the guns.

The English, as a people, are universally known as a nation of very sturdy rights, and a recent case in Liverpool illustrates these characteristics strikingly. A purchaser of tea complained that he had to pay for the bag at the tea rate, when he bought tea, because the grocer put the tea in the bag and weighed the bag and tea together. The case was taken before a magistrate's court and the hapless grocer was fined. He appealed the case and the high court has decided that he was within his rights in weighing the bag with tea because that was the universal practice and custom, which was generally understood and acquiesced in. The striking thing about the whole case and the proceedings in connection with it is the extraordinary tenacity with which the Englishman pursues little things and the serious and orderly manner in which he sets about to regulate the minutest matters which concern his pocketbook.

It is idle to go to college without a lively appreciation of the main business for which one goes. That is to do college work. A college degree worth the having can be won by nothing but serious, resolute, systematic habits. Habits must be regular. He rational living and strong pur vital factors. Recreation is essential to sane living. So a division of time is important. cannot rest too much and do nor can he work overmuch with endangering his powers of work cannot by any course of pleasure rob his body and mind native strength and natural ze out failing in the main thing he goes to college. Then the problem of student friendships ganizations. In many cases they have gone so far before leaving that they settle this matter at not, it settles itself very quick the time comes. It is interesting times amusing, to see how qu new student settles down with tenacity, or with the Christian tion, or with a literary society, a scientific club, or with the "lans." Close association with co spirits is natural, and it is w boy should make close friendship those whose friendships mean to him. There is something mo friendship in the student organiz There is good experience in help manage an organization, in the city of giving way to others at in the habit of standing up for thing, and in the necessity of so ing the affairs of an organizatio one can stand up for it. A stud nies himself much if he does not with some college organization.

Sancho Panza said: "God ble man who first invented sleep." T may be added a blessing for the don physician who is putting in a test against early rising. The na the physician is not given, but ever he is he deserves a bened "May he live long and prosper." wise doctor says: "To be forc get up early grinds the soul, ct the blood, swells the spleen, de all good intentions and disturbs al the mental activities. Criminals always recruited from the early class." How different this from old New England adage about to bed and early to rise and the vantages of the early bird and all. Wake up at 5 o'clock in the mor and see who it is that is stirring it the wealthy? Is it the health the wise? No, it is the milkman, would not think of getting up e if daily necessity did not compel is he getting rich? Not too fast, e cially if he is honest. Or it is the paper carrier or the street car ductor or some other whose work pels him to be up early. There is a rich man among them. The who is at liberty to wake up leant to come down to his breakfast w out any hurried preparations and goes to his business after he has the morning paper is far more li to be healthy and wise than the in a rush, and he is certainly a more agreeable man to meet either in a social or business way. If one must get up early, if fate decides there is no other way, resignation is called for, but let no man who gets up early think he is living the ideal life or that his action calls for special praise. Even though he may be amiable he would let nature have her way and wake up slowly. Who knows but that in the last analysis the origin of all evil is the getting up too early, beginning the day "wrong end to," and finding out when it is too late that a little more sleep, a little more slumber would have made the face of all creation look brighter?

Stuffed Green Peppers.
Cut the stem-ends from peppers and remove the white membrane and seeds. Put into a dish and pour boiling water over them, then let them stand until cold in the water. This takes away all hot taste. Drain and fill with a forcemeat of chopped mutton, beef or veal, to which a little minced ham has been added, and stir in enough boiled rice to make a paste of the mixture. Moisten with seasoned gravy or soup-stock. Replace the ends on the peppers, stand up in a bake-dish, pour the gravy or stock about them and bake until tender. Serve at once. If you like, you may thicken the gravy and Frizzled Carrots.

Peel the carrots, and slice very thin and let stand in cold water an hour; fry in a towel, and pour them into a kettle half full of boiling fat. Fry a nice brown, skim out, then place on brown paper, sprinkle with salt and sugar, put in the oven until hot, and serve at once.
Hints for the Housewife.
Do not waste banana skins; they are excellent for cleaning glass kid boots or brown boots and shoes. Rub first with the banana skin, then polish with a cloth.
When washing white or colored ribbons, add one teaspoonful of methylated spirits to a pint of cold water and rinse the ribbon through, and it will look quite new.
A few drops of good scent on bits of pumice stone, and the bits slipped in bureau drawers or among gowns in a wardrobe, will perfume clothing delightfully.
To keep soup let it remain covered with a coating of fat, as it excludes the air and helps to preserve the stock. If the soup has no fat, use clarified dripping for the purpose.
