

HONOR TO SHERMAN.

Statue to the Civil War Commander Unveiled in Washington.

The President and Other Distinguished Civil and Military Personages Attended -Ex-Speaker Henderson's Tribute to Old "Tecumseh."

Washington, Oct. 16.—To the memory of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman an equestrian statue was unveiled here by a little boy, William Tecumseh

It is a magnificent work of art which has been in course of construction for several years. The design was by Carl Rohlf-Smith, but he died before the statue was completed, and it was finished under the direction of his wife. The statue stands just south of the treasury building, and is visible the whole length of Pennsylvania avenue, the most conspicuous site in Washington.

Sherman Thorndyke, grandson of the dead chieftain, in the presence of official Washington, the president, the diplomatic corps and the cabinet at its head. Thousands of veterans, members of the societies of armies of the Cumberland, the Tennessee, the Ohio and the Potomac, all the regular troops in the vicinity of Washington, a battalion of marines, two battalions of seamen and the district national guard were reviewed by the president before the unveiling ceremonies, which began at 2:30 o'clock. Gen. Greenville M. Dodge, president of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee and chairman of the Sherman statue commission, made the introductory address. Upon its conclusion the Marine band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," the Fourth field battery, United States army, fired a salute and the flags which hid from view the statue were drawn aside by the grandson of the hero to whose memory it was erected.

President Roosevelt was then introduced and delivered a lengthy address eulogistic of the general. As soon as the applause following the president's address had subsided, David B. Henderson, of Iowa, former speaker of the house of representatives, spoke on behalf of the Army of the Cumberland. In eulogy of Gen. Sherman he said: "The language of this statue tells what he fought for—peace. To recount his battles is to give a history of the civil war. He never drew his sword without drawing blood and making permanent history. His march to the sea is generally regarded as his greatest campaign, but this is an error. It was a brilliant campaign—the world so rated it—but it did not come up to the genius and grandeur of the campaign immediately following it, when he carried practically the same army from Savannah to North Carolina. That was the greatest work of Sherman's life." Mr. Henderson, in the course of his address, referred to Booth, Guiteau and Czolgosz as the "horrid, damnable manifestations of our national growth."
