BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROOSEVELT AND FAIRBANKS.

The republican convention met in Chicago this week and nominated the next president and vice-president. Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for president and Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana for vice-president, both by acclamation. Fairbanks is now United States senator.

"The Papa's Boy" company were here this morning en route to Peru where they are booked for a performance this evening. While at the B & M. depot the leading man, who by the way is a big man, and one of the other members of the company got into an altercation. They fought all over the platform and finally the big man won out and boarding the train refused to allow the little man and one other member of the company to follow. The company will play at Peru two people shy to-night. The lady of the show left it and went to Kansas City, while the defeated male member goes down tonight to clean out the show and get his baggage which went down there, also try and get some salary that he claims is due him.—Nebr. City News.

Only a few years ago John H. Dundas was a rampant party prohibitionist running for office on the prohibition ticket, denouncing everybody that did not vote that ticket, and insisting that the voter should cast his ballot for the principles of the party. After a while he switched off to the populist party, and argued that it was the only party to save the country. He still denounced the republican and democratic parties, but said nothing about it being essential for a party to have a prohibition plank in every platform, as he had insisted upon before. He ran for office on this ticket. Then the populist party fused with the democratic party, and John went along, ran for office on the fusion ticket, and greatly to his surprise was elected. Now John claims that it is very wrong to belong to any party, and insinuates that a man is not exactly right that will even attend party conventions regularly. And yet John insists that he is the only consistent man and the only fellow that is always right.

HE HAD MANY IMITATORS.

The Alliance of Pocahontas with an Englishman Set a Bad Precedent.

Every once in awhile, when an American girl of wealth marries an Englishman of more or less distinction, a cry goes up all over the country about the weakness of the young women of this country for such alliances. No one seems to know that the custom dates back to the earliest settlement of the country and that the American princess Pocahontas was the first to set her sisters the bad example. In Boonton hall, in the county of Norfolk, formerly the seat of the Rolfe family, hangs a portrait by De Passe of a handsome young woman, with high cheek bones and complexion splendidly swarthy. Around this portrait are the words Matoaka Rebecka, filia potentis Prince Powbatani Imp. Virginiae, and on a space below the portrait are the words: "Matoaka, alias Rebecka, daughter of the mighty Prince Powbatani, emperor of Attanough Komouck, of Virginia; a Christian convert and married to the Worshipful Mr. Thomas Rolfe. Aged 21. 1616." This portrait of the far-famed Princess Pocahontas was painted but a few weeks before she died on board a ship about to sail for America. She was buried in the parish church of Gravesend, at the mouth of the river Thames, and to this day the curious can see the following entry in the parish register: "1616. March 21. Rebecca Wolfe, wife of Thomas Wolfe, gent, a Virginia lady born, was buried here in the chancel." Unfortunately the original edifice was burned down a century ago, otherwise Americans could now look upon the tomb of the first American girl who took an English husband.

GAVE LIFE FOR HIS FRIEND.

The Touching Act of Heroism That Was Witnessed in a South African Camp.

"One of the most touching incidents of the Boer-English war came to my knowledge just as I was leaving for America," said a missionary delegate from South Africa to the ecumenical conference, relates the Washington Post. "Of course, there have been many brave deeds and many acts of self-sacrifice on both sides, but none has seemed to me as affecting as that of the little ten-year-old lad who gave his life protecting the man who had befriended him.

"It was during the siege of Ladysmith, and the British army had its base at Spearman's camp—perhaps I should say Gen. Buller's base was at Spearman's camp—when one evening a little boy struggled into camp, and when questioned by the soldiers said he had come from Ladysmith. He was of English parentage and said that his father had been killed at the very beginning of the hostilities; his mother had been buried the week before, and he had left Ladysmith determined to join the English army. How he managed to slip through the Boer lines was the question which puzzled the English soldiers, for at that time it was not thought possible for a bird to pass unnoticed, so strict was their watch. This child said he thought he had been shot at, but he must have been 'too little to be hit.'

"He was such a weazen-faced slip of a child that the soldiers recognized the truth of his surmise, dubbed him 'Too-Little-to-Be-Hit' Blunt, his real name being Jimmy Blunt. He knocked about camp and finally attached himself to Maj. English, of the Second Dublin fusiliers. He became the major's shadow, eating, sleeping and moving about with him on any and all occasions. It became a joke among the soldiers the way 'Too-Little-to-Be-Hit' followed their major.

"Finally came the action of Venter's Spruit, when the major, leaving his company, walked a short distance ahead to see 'how the land lay.' He was shot down and a deadly fire from the Boers, who had been in ambush, followed. The boy was so hot that no attempt was made by the soldiers to go to their officer, and when they saw 'Too-Little-to-Be-Hit' making the attempt he was ordered back. He did not obey the command, that much the soldiers know, but he was forgotten until the close of the engagement, when, on collecting their wounded and dead, they found he had managed in some way to drag his wounded friend from the open to the cover of some brush wood. 'Too-Little-to-Be-Hit' was lying by the major's side, apparently asleep, but when the soldiers lifted him up they found that he was dead. He had bled to death from a wound in the fleshy part of the arm. So, after all, he was not 'too little to be hit.'

Fresh Water in the Ocean.

Every little schoolboy and girl in America has learned from the geography that the fresh water current of the Amazon extends into the ocean 20 miles from the mouth of that noble river, so that ships are able to get drinking water from the ocean when out of sight of land. But even among the grown folk it is not generally known that Americans have a river in which they can take similar pride. On still, calm days the crew of the light-ship anchored three miles southwest of the mouth of the Columbia river, Oregon, are able at strong ebb to send a bucket over the side and bring up water so palatably fresh as to be used for drinking. This fresh water spreads out over the surface of the ocean in the shape of a fan, the apex being the mouth of the Columbia. It is only about two feet in depth, and if the bucket is allowed to sink below that the water with which it is filled is strong with ocean brine.—N. Y. Press.

Profits in Lobsters.

The live lobster imports from the Canadian maritime provinces are rapidly increasing in value. They promise for this fiscal year to constitute at least a sixth of all the goods shipped from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick to the American market. Coming in duty free and sold at a high price on account of the scarcity of the domestic article, they offer a profitable return on the investment.—N. Y. Sun.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out. Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.
