A housewife in Finland buys a new room every morning. This is a necessary extravagance, since she weeps her whole house every day, and the broom she uses is just a bundle of fresh, green birch leaves, whose natural dampness licks up the lust.

For Growing Girls.

West Pembroke, Me., April 24.—Mrs. A. L. Smith, of this place, says that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for growing girls. Mrs. Smith emphasizes her recommendation by the following experience:

"My daughter was thirteen years old last November and it is now two years since she was first taken with Crazy Spells that would last a week and would then pass off. In a month she would have the spells again. At these times she would eat very little and was very yellow; even the whites of her eyes would be yellow.

"The doctors gave us no encouragement; they all said they could not help her. After taking one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she has not had one bad spell. Of course, we continued the treatment until she had used in all about a dozen boxes, and we still give them to her occasionally, when she is not feeling well. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the best medicine for growing girls."

Mothers should heed the advice of Mrs. Smith, for by so doing, they may save their daughters much pain and sickness and insure a healthy, happy future for them.

Some girls waste a lot of time looking for the ideal man when there are a lot of real ones lying around loose.

A well seasoned old darky named Ben Case, aged ninety-eight, died recently in Richmond, Va. This worthy, although born after George Washington had passed from earth was prone to boast that he had seen the first President inaugurated, frequently went fishing with him, and often attended him as a bodyguard and coachman. Most of Ben's friends, on account of his fondness for romancing, considered him a hard case.

The Japanese field marshal, Oyama, once said: "My idea of happiness is to dispense with everything I possess that belongs to the practice of arms, and go far into the country with big boxes of books to read for the rest of my days; books that tell of happiness and progress, and not of the terrible deeds of war."

Alabastine Your Walls

There is a "new thought" in wall decorations as in everything else, and the new thought being interpreted means Alabastine.

The most beautiful arts and crafts effects, the most artistic designs, the most beautiful colorings this year are in ALABASTINE.

ALABASTINE being made from Alabaster rock cements and becomes a part of your wall. Some wall coverings are made from whitening or chalk with a little fine mixed in, and they rub off. ALABASTINE is rock finish. If you are not satisfied with the appearance of your walls, you need ALABASTINE.

We supply color schemes free for the asking. Just mention the size of your room, the use you put it to, and whether it is north, south or west light. We will supply you with a scheme for your walls. Don't forget your church or school rooms. Do they not need Alabastine? Sold everywhere by the best dealers. If not by yours write the

One of the college presidents thinks the higher education will eventually cause the obliteration of the human race. Are we to understand from this that the time is coming when the man who confesses that he is a father will at once be listed with the illiterate?

The study of the infinitesimal is progressing. W. A. Sherstone declares in the Cornhill Magazine that there "are no atoms now; they have all been cut up into electrons and corpuscles." The chemical atoms that go to make up a single cubic centimeter of water, which would nicely fill the shell of a small ribbit, number 90,000,000,000,000,000 (ninety thousand million billion), and it is thought that their individual weight may be determined.

Churches in the United States prospered during 1904. The Lutheran shows the largest ratio of growth, a gain of more than 5 per cent over the membership in 1903; the Protestant Episcopal comes next, and the Disciples of Christ follow. Hardly any denomination lost in members or contributions, and "there are to-day," on the authority of the Church Economist, "more Christian believers, more students of the Bible, more churches and more money raised for Christian enterprises than ever before since the birth of Christ." Still there are "waste places," but in the foregoing facts there is inspiration and sustenance for all who are laboring to comfort and rebuild.

A publication devoted to suggestive therapeutics, telepathy and kindred interests maintains that thousands of people actually think themselves to death every year by allowing their minds to dwell on morbid subjects. It would be more accurate to say that these persons worry themselves to death. It is not thinking. To think would be to fortify the mind against morbidity. There seems to be no doubt that unreasoning and unreasonable worry has a distinct and pernicious effect on mind and body. That it is practicable to overcome this cause of trouble is affirmed by special students of psychology, but there is an attraction to some minds in morbid melancholy and a disposition to shun whatever is cheerful and wholesome.

In the army no small proportion of the officers, especially since the Spanish war, have come from the ranks. In the navy, and in spite of recent legislation, there is practically impassable barrier between fore-castle and quarter-deck, and the few men who have succeeded in overcoming it have been enabled to do so chiefly through the urgent need of officers, a demand which will soon be supplied by the graduates of the greatly enlarged naval academy at Annapolis, when the "door of hope," for the moment ajar, will be closed again. The natural consequences of drawing this hard and fast caste line is that the best and most promising young men in the service leave it just as they begin to be valuable to it. As in every other career, the knowledge that it is impossible to rise above a certain and wholly subordinate position has a deadening or demoralizing effect upon any man worth having.

The remarkable religious revival in Wales and the awakening in London has turned attention sharply to similar possibilities in other parts of the world. The distinguished English editor, W. T. Stead, and the eminent American clergyman, Newell Dwight Hillis, unite in the prediction that the movement is to become world-wide. Certainly, the time is ripe. Mankind has been moving at a rapid pace. It is a hard, materialistic age. The rich have become more and more lavish and oppressive of the poor, and the poor have given themselves up very largely to the thought of how to keep up with the progression. It might seem to the unthinking that this is the hardest of conditions for religious enthusiasm to break in upon. But the truth is that human nature swings, like the pendulum, from the extreme of idealism to that of materialism and from the materialism back to idealism. Its attitude to-day is no indication that it will be the same to-morrow. World-wide materialism works its own cure. The whole thing eventually breaks down of its own weight. Men's minds become surfeited and susceptible to other and very different considerations. It is then remembered and proclaimed that man does not live by bread alone. We may have so much of the now and here as to sicken of it, and turn to thought of the beyond for rest and inspiration.

At the meeting of the Religious Educational Association in Boston Bishop Lawrence made some excellent remarks on the power and value of wealth. Other speakers had referred to the age as materialistic and had deplored the fact that it was devoted to commercialism. Without refuting anything that had been said the bishop of Massachusetts spoke on the importance of money and especially its value in connection with spiritual and intellectual matters. "Why is it," said Bishop Lawrence, "that we are sometimes afraid of the enormous increase of wealth? Increase of wealth is one of the greatest opportunities of this country and we ought to glory in it and rejoice in it just as any man ought to rejoice in the increase of his physical strength, provided he has the mind and heart and the character to handle his physique." The tone of Bishop Lawrence is the more remarkable because it seems to be the part of the clergy and of the college professor in these days to decry wealth and the amount of attention given to the acquisition of it. Not that the clergy and the college professor do not want money, for they are always begging from men of wealth, but they berate the spirit that prompts the pursuit of it and do not appreciate the fact that the business man must give himself unwearily to the acquisition of a fortune exactly as the scholar must give his days and nights to the pursuit of knowledge. Bishop Lawrence placed the stress where it should be placed. He accentuated the necessity of spiritual and moral development along with acquisition of riches. He has no fear for the increase of material wealth either by the individual man or by the nation if along with it there is growth in mind, heart and character. There is an insincerity in constantly begging for money and then formally denouncing those who make a business of earning it. Bishop Lawrence's position is consistent "not to fear the increase of wealth, but to fear the loss of the inspiration of religion and of the intelligence which ought to go with it."

Laughs Too Much.
One Kansas City policeman cannot go to the theaters because he laughs so long and loud at every joke that he stops the performance. He was put on a boat where his duty took him inside a theater for a few minutes every evening, and he asked to be changed, because he said the theater people wouldn't let him stay inside, even when he bought a ticket.

Before he was married he took his sweetheart to a show once, but at the end of the second act the manager touched him on the back and said he would have to get out. He had all the actors laughing.

"But I paid to see this show," protested the policeman. "If you put me out I shall insist on your giving my money back."

"We'll be glad to do that, all right," said the manager.

And they did.

Senor Quesada, Cuban Minister to the United States, is an orator born. In an article in The Outlook for July, 1899, by George Kennan, who heard Quesada speak at the Esteban Theater, Matanzas, Cuba, he said: "I have seen many audiences under the spell of eloquent speech and in the grip of strong emotional excitement; but I have rarely witnessed such a scene as at the close of Quesada's eulogy upon the dead patriot, Marti." In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, written from Washington, D. C., Senor Quesada says:

"Peruna I can recommend as a very good medicine. It is an excellent strengthening tonic, and it is also an efficacious cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."—Gonzalo De Quesada.

Congressman J. H. Bankhead, of Alabama, one of the most influential members of the House of Representatives, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., gives his endorsement to the great catharr remedy, Peruna, in the following words:

"Your Peruna is one of the best medicines I ever tried, and no family should be without your remarkable remedy. As a tonic and catharr cure know of nothing better."—J. H. Bankhead.
