Otto Barker is suffering from a boil on the side of his face, near the mouth, and says if Job suffered as much from each boil and had as many as reported, he would certainly take the prize for patience if he kept sweet under the affliction. Otto can neither sleep, eat, drink or talk in comfort.

The county commissioners have had a great deal of trouble with the bridge by the Webber farm, and have had to build a new bridge, fix approaches, etc., very frequently. A great deal of water comes down the draw in times of rain. The commissioners have finally determined to build a bridge that will stand and have ordered several car loads of large heavy stone from the Johnson quarry that are now being shipped in and hauled out to the bridge. It is thought they will put in one that will hold for a life time.

Joseph Beard died at his home on the bottom road between Nemaha and Brownville on Wednesday morning, Sept. 26. The deceased was one of the old settlers of the county, coming here over fifty years ago, and had lived on the farm where he died nearly all of this time. He has been in poor health for a long time, suffering from a cancer on his face and dropsy.

The funeral services were held at the house at 11 o'clock Thursday and the body taken to Brownville for burial. The deceased leaves an aged wife and two children—John M. Beard of Ravena, Nebr., and Mrs. Wm. Gillespie living between Nemaha and Brownville.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Gould, the Methodist minister of Brownville. Deceased was a member of the Christian church. He was about 78 years of age.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Chet Sedoras of Brownville was accidentally killed last Saturday forenoon. The little fellow, who was about 20 months old, was playing out by the pump. A two inch galvanized pipe ran from the pump to a tub outside the fence, the end of the pipe next the pump fitting in a box. The baby was evidently swinging on the pipe when it came down, striking him on the neck. His mother looking out the door saw him lying there with the pipe across his neck. She screamed that her baby was killed and ran to him. A doctor was sent for but when he came, though he said there was a little life yet, he could do nothing, as the child's neck was broken.

The funeral services conducted by Rev. J. W. Sapp, the child's grandfather, were held at the Christian church Sunday afternoon. Not near all who attended could get in the church. The remarks of Rev. Sapp were very affecting and there were few if any dry eyes in the audience. The parents and grandparents are almost heartbroken over the terrible affair. The child was the only child and also Rev. Sapp's only grandchild, and as he was very bright and loving was thought a great deal of.

The Nemaha Advertiser is No. 2 among Nebraska newspapers that have passed the half century mark, the Nebraska City News being the first. Brother Bryan says "no good can come out of a trust." Since one of his running mates in 1896—Sewall—was the head of a trust, and Jones, the chairman of his committee, was the head of the cotton bale trust; and since Parker, whom he supported in 1904, had the united support of all the democratic trusts of the country, and since Taggart, the present chairman, is at the head of the gambling trust; and since Mr. Walsh of Iowa has resigned his position as committeeman because such trust magnates as Sullivan, Belmont, Sheehan, Nichol, Smitta, et al., are dominating the democratic party, one can hardly blame the "peerless" for not wishing to trust the trusts during his third battle.—Crete Vidette Herald.

John H. Kearnes, formerly one of the proprietors of the Auburn Herald, is now editor of the Republican, Will S. Crichton having sold his interest in the paper and retired. Mr. Kearnes is one of the brightest writers in this neck of the woods and will make the Republican a newsy and interesting paper. We have not learned what Mr. Crichton intends doing. He has our best wishes for future prosperity.

The "Royal Hawaiian Band" of sixty skilled musicians went west on the passenger Wednesday morning, having been at Nebraska City the night before. G. N. Titus had a load of fine apples at a car on the sidetrack almost opposite where the coach containing the band stopped. The boys saw the apples and the way they piled off the train and made for the load of apples was a sight. Of course Nat told them to help themselves, and they carried back all they could hold in both hands and arms.

Some farmers are complaining that on account of the low price of apples this year their orchards do not pay, but we believe figures will prove different. I. N. Cooper has about six acres in apple orchard. When he rented his farm to Norman Mead this went with the remainder of the farm, the tenant to gather and deliver the crop in market for one-half the crop. It cost Mr. Mead about $24.50 to gather and haul the apples to town, charging for his own labor. There were 24,460 pounds of apples for which they received 55 cents per 100—a total of $134.53. There are 30 or 40 bushels of apples left in the orchard. Mr. Cooper will get about $12 rent per acre for his orchard and Mr. Mead will clear over $7 per acre after getting paid for his work. That is good pay for both of them. The apples were fine. Other farmers have probably done as well or better. Orchards pay if taken care of, even if prices are low.

Preliminary Trial of Williams Boys

The preliminary trial of Clarence M. and Charles Williams for the murder of their father, Isaac Williams, was held in the court room at Auburn Tuesday, before Judge McCarty. The coroner, coroner's jury and a few other witnesses were examined. No evidence was offered for the defence. Judge McCarty bound the boys over to district court, Charles, the younger boy, under $10,000 bail and Clarence, the older one, without bail, but his attorneys were given 48 hours to apply to the district judge for a writ of habeas corpus. Tom Bath and Barney McIninch went on Charles' bond and he was released. M. S. McIninch, H. A. Lambert and Ed Ferneau are attorneys for the defendants, County Attorney French had no assistance.

The testimony was mainly as to the testimony offered before the coroner's jury by the boys and what the boys had told after the tragedy, the position of the body, the condition of the wounds, etc. From the testimony it appears that shortly after 12 o'clock on the 13th of September Charles got into a quarrel with his father while they were getting ready to start to Barney McIninch's to help thresh. The team was hitched to a wagon with bed and sideboards on. Charles asked for money to go to school with. His father said, "I'll money you," and started for the wagon and got a pitchfork, climbing into the wagon to get it. As soon as he started for the wagon Clarence said he knew what that meant, so he ran into the old house, only a few feet away, and got a loaded shotgun. As he came around the rear end of the wagon his father was starting for Charles, who stood at the head of the horses, toward the south. Clarence fired both loads into his father's back, one taking effect just below the left shoulder blade and the other lower down on the right side. The upper shot rangd directly in and the lower one up and out. As Mr. Williams fell Charles fired four shots at him, only one striking him, that one being in the back of the fleshy part of the left arm, ranging up. Mr. Williams made one attempt to get up and Clarence struck at him with the gun, but evidently did not hit him, as there were no bruises of any kind on the body. The stock of the gun was broken, but this might have been done by the team stepping on it. Mr. Williams was about even with the brake when shot. He fell with his head to the west, face downward. Death occurred almost instantly. The pitchfork lay near the body, with the handle next to the body. There was no testimony to show that Charles ran, but on the contrary he was standing at the head of the horses all the time, and his father had just got down from the wagon and started for him when he was shot.

The above is the substance of the testimony given.

The Auburn Herald recently objected to Charley Hacker as a candidate because the Hackers had run for office so often. But they were always elected, so they must have been satisfactory. The truth is that Uncle Jim Hacker was county clerk two terms in early days. After that he was elected county surveyor for years—not because he wanted the office, which paid very little, but because he was for a long time the only competent surveyor in the county. Charley Hacker ran for county clerk five years ago, the first time he ever ran for any office in the county, and was elected, defeating a strong candidate of the fusionists who was running for the second term. Two years later he was reelected. Last fall he was nominated for surveyor against his strong protests, and was again elected. He has been a candidate four times. Roe Conner, his opponent, has been a candidate six times. Twice he was elected county commissioner and twice he was defeated. He was also defeated for the legislature.

The fact that a man makes such a good record as an official that the people ask him to try again is nothing against him.

D. 1906, Thomas Pohlman filed a petition against you in the district court of Nemaha county, Nebraska, the object and prayer of which is to obtain a divorce from you on the ground that you have willfully and unlawfully deserted and abandoned the said plaintiff and that you have remained away from said plaintiff and his home for more than two years last past without any just cause whatever. THOMAS POHLMAN, Plaintiff. By S. M. Weddle & Hawkey, his attorneys.

J. S. McCARTY, County Judge

Unless a decision of the supreme court, repealing an act of congress passed at the last session, can be secured within the next few months, the Burlington Relief may go out of business, as will also five or six similar institutions in the United States. The officials of the Burlington are purported, on good authority, to have reached this decision shortly after the passage of a measure which holds that the release secured by the company upon the payment of disability and death benefits, is no protection from damage suits which might ensue later.

A conference of all the companies in the country will be held in the near future at which the best counsel available will be employed to test the validity of the measure in the highest court of the United States. In the event that the release is held valid the relief will continue to be conducted on its present basis but not otherwise.

A rumor that the relief would go out of business shortly has been in circulation for some time and the matter has been a subject of deep concern to the employes all over the system. The report that the reason for the move was that the institution was on a shaky financial basis is entirely unfounded. The reserve now on hand is sufficient for all possible exigencies and the action is simply one of expediency. The cost of conducting the relief exceeds $85,000 a year for medical examiners and office help alone and, in view of the fact that the company is still liable for damage suits, it is regarded as being in a viable condition to continue the concern along the present line.—Havelock Messenger.

The Breath of Life

It's a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla, also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs means powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chiefest study. Like thousands of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stevens, of Port Williams, O., has learned how to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. O, it's grand for throat and lung troubles."
