Geo. Codington has been elected cashier of the Nemaha County bank at Auburn to succeed Will Gaede, deceased, and is now fulfilling his duties in that position. George is eminently qualified for the position. His brother James now has charge of the bus line.

Marshall Webb is certainly an enthusiastic fisherman, but he is liable to get in trouble with the faithful, as he was so taken up with his favorite pursuit Monday that he would not leave his lines even to see Colonel Bryan. He had to distribute some fish, though, in order to square himself.

John H. Knapp and Harry Stevens, who is working for him, have been doing some big corn shucking. Last week they gathered and cribbed 1230 bushels of corn, and the field where the corn was gathered was a mile and a half from the crib. Each day they left the field at from 2:45 to 3:30. John got in 630 bushels and Stevens 600. The corn in that field went 57 bushels per acre.

The W. W. W. Medicine Company were here all last week and did a good business. They conducted themselves as gentlemen, paid their bills and are coming back again in February or March. They have contracted for the opera house and made all other arrangements for their return date. Their show was high class and clean and they conducted their business in a straight and legitimate manner.

William Jennings Bryan, the "peerless" leader of the untried, came past Nemaha Monday afternoon on a special train. A small crowd was at the depot to greet him but not a cheer gladdened his heart. He said a few word to urge the faithful to take their medicine straight. Mrs. Littrell pinned some flowers on his bosom, the whistle blew, Billy Keeling bade the eloquent colonel farewell, and the special moved on on its way to shed light to a blinded populace. There was no enthusiasm whatever.

The Election in Nemaha Precinct

The vote in Nemaha precinct Tuesday was the smallest for years, only 173 being cast. Of these the republicans got an average on the state ticket of 91 and a fraction, the fusionists 66 and a fraction and the prohibitionists 12 and a fraction. On the county ticket the republicans did not fare so well. Pollard lost 7 and Doyle gained 8 from above average.

Raper for district judge gained 2 and Ashby lost 1. O'Connell and Armstrong gained 1, Hillman lost 6, Phelan 1, Lawrence lost 5 and Parker 17, while Quackenbush gained 15 and Redmond 2. French got his party vote and Lambert 2 more than his full vote. Hacker lost 6 and Conner gained 10.

As the nominees of the republican party for road overseer were not printed on the ballot, the clerk at the primary having failed to report them, all three fusionists were elected:—Charles Stanley in district 32, Frank Collin in 33 and George Rhineshart in 34.

Last year 198 votes were cast in this precinct. Of this number the republican average state vote was 98, the fusion vote 76, and the prohibition vote 9. The republicans lost 7, the fusionists 10 and the prohibitionists gained 3 according to this.

Quackenbush was the only fusionist that carried the precinct outside of precinct officers. Sheldon and Hopewell, candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, got the largest vote on the republican ticket. On the county ticket O'Donnell and Armstrong got the largest vote, with French only one behind.
