

A copper half-cent struck in 1850, and very rare, has just been sold for $51, the record price for a coin of that old-style cap and ball revolver into the timber with me that fall, just because I was charmed with its phenomenal be had. On his daddy's side, I mean. The bitch that dropped him, though, was half wolf and half bulldog, I heard no bones broke, and just jarred some. Leander and the water had busted the force of the fall, you see.
