No Verdict Yet in Williams Murder Trial

The case of Clarence Williams, on trial for the murder of his father, Isaac Williams, was given to the jury Tuesday afternoon. Up to the time we go to press, Friday morning, the jury had not agreed. It is rumored that eleven are for acquittal.

Marion Seid, brakeman on the northwestern railroad, came down from Norfolk last Friday to renew acquaintance with his family.

Ed Knapp, rural carrier on route No. 2, has been telling about feasting on fresh meat given him by patrons of the route, who appreciate the services rendered.

Carl E. Sanders, carrier on rural route No. 1 has been presented during the past week with fresh meat from J. H. Seid, W. S. Russell, R. I. Brown, W. H. Rider and J. F. Rider. He appreciates their liberality.

The Right Name

Mr. August Sherpe, the popular overseer of the poor, at Ft. Madison, Ia., says: "Dr. King's New Life Pills are rightly named; they act more agreeably to more good and make one feel better than any other laxative." Guaranteed to cure biliousness and constipation. 25c at Hill Bros drug store.

The funeral services of Elias Barker were held at the Methodist church at Shubert last Friday. Rev. P. B. Ruch was sick and not able to preach the sermon, as was requested by the deceased, so Rev. J. W. Sapp conducted the services. A number from Nemaha attended.

Ed Workman, when in the Indian Territory recently, rented his farm there for this year to Roy Wilson, who formerly lived near Shubert. While at Broken Arrow he sold his share of last season's corn crop on his farm, amounting to about 300 bushels. Mr. Workman says it is estimated that 300,000 bushels of corn are stored at Broken Arrow. He brought The Press a very fine specimen of mistletoe, which grows in that section.—Stella Press.

In Lumber Business

W. H. Stowell, of the Auburn Gold Mining Company, is down from Mystic, visiting friends. He and Charles Anderson have gone into the lumber business in the Black Hills section and are cutting considerable timber. The demand of the product of the saw mills is very good and the prospects are that they will make a good success of their new venture. Mr. Stowell will devote considerable of his time to the lumber business.—Republican.

Redmond is a member of the Committees on Finance, Ways and Means, and Deficiencies.

They Like Music

Herb Aynes thinks Earle Gilbert and Fred Hoover must be fond of music. Thursday night after closing the store Earle and Fred made Herb open the hardware store and told him he had to play a few pieces on the graphophone. Herb has over one hundred selections and started to play all of them. Earle and Fred stayed with him till half past three in the morning when Earle became uneasy for fear his wife would become alarmed at his being out so late and send Frank Woodward to hunt him up, so the session closed. They claim that Herb rung in some old pieces that nobody likes just to tire them out, but Herb says he would have been there playing at noon the next day if they had stayed with him.

Omaha May Build Barges

An Omaha correspondent says: At the suggestion of Congressman Kennedy, the Commercial club issued a call for a public meeting of business men, to be held Friday, to organize a company to build and operate barges on the Missouri river. Congressman Kennedy urged that if Omaha commercial interests desired a government appropriation for the improvement of the Missouri river the business men must set before the government the concrete example of the fact that the Missouri river is a profitably navigable proposition. It was also urged that a barge line to carry grain to the gulf would bring a reduction in rates by rail. Congressman Bartholdt, urging that the country which was rich enough to spend several hundred million in building the Panama canal could spend $50,000,000 or $100,000,000 annually if necessary in improving its rivers and harbors.

Interesting Reminiscences

Mrs. Elizabeth Fuller can give some very interesting reminiscences of early times in Nebraska. She landed in Nebraska with her parents Feb. 10 1854—almost 53 years ago. They moved on the Mart May farm, one-half mile north of Nemaha, which her father, Houston Russell, preempted. Mrs. Fuller, then Lizzie Russell, drove the ox team with which the first ten acres on this farm was broken up. She also drove the ox team and hauled poles from the Lockwood Bend, south of Nemaha, to fence this same ten acres. Her father and brother, Terrel, would go down in the morning and cut the poles and she would haul them home, making two loads in the forenoon, and would then unhitch and feed, hitching up after dinner and bringing two more loads, her father and brother coming back with the last load. Indians were then very numerous—more so than white people. Wild animals were also numerous. A bear was killed by members of the family, and also a strange animal different from anything they had ever seen, but which Mrs. Fuller thinks was a lynx. Deer, wild turkeys and other game was plentiful. There were many hardships in those times, but a great many pleasures as well.

A talk by these old pioneers, such as Mrs. Fuller, W. T. Russell, T. B. Skeen, Samuel Stiers, and others—the very earliest settlers—would be intensely interesting at the meeting of the old settlers association.

The body type of The Advertiser that has just been discarded had been in constant use for twenty-seven years. It was bought by Fairbrother & Hacker when they were proprietors of The Advertiser, then located in Brownville. It was the old style Bourgeois, a little larger than the present eight point, but not so large as nine point. Printers can tell what this means if no one else can. The old type has certainly served its time.

It's for Croup, that's all. Sold by all dealers.
