A LOCAL exchange strikes out from BY OUR ASSISTANT EDITOR. the shoulder in this way: "It is certainly very funny to hear a man howling about patronizing home industries, when he uses a rubber stamp to make the most horrible daubs of letter heads and cards with which nice white paper is spoiled. Most men's ideas of patronizing home industries is for everybody else to do it."

Ar a station in Montana, the other day, a Boston girl stuck her head out of a Northern Pacific ear and exclaimed: "The bewildering womance which crowns this twanscendental scenery with such indescwibable fascination and tinges its evewy featuh with such overpcwing interwest quite bweaks me up!" And a number of members of the local vigilance committee standing on the platform look grimly into each other's faces and muttered, "Oh! if it was only a man!"—Bismarck Tribune.

For a woman of spirit, commend us to Mrs. Fred Dozier, of Ouray, Colorado. Her liege lord had a habit of squandering his money at the gaming table. Poker was his mania, and he always bet high, but the invariable result was that he was cleaned out before he could leave the table. This habit of Fred's was quite inconvenient to Mrs. Fred, as it deprived her of a fair share of his earnings, and as he seldom or never had any winnings it may be surmised that the family exchequer was in a state of continued collapse. Now Mrs. Fred was a woman of spirit, as all women ought to be. So one night, shortly after Fred sat down to the fascinating game of draw she entered the den and secreted herself behind a curtain where she could overlook the play. Luck ran Fred's way, and he soon had a fine pile of coin before him. His fortune culminated in a big pot, he holding four tens against several hands of but little less value. Just as he showed down the winning cards, Mrs. Fred glided from her place of concealment, swept the pot and Fred's pile into her apron, and quietly went thence. Not having enough left to go in the next deal, the subsequent proceedings interested Fred no more. When he sobered up and went home next day, he found the cellar stocked with a six month's supply of provisious, the children all warmly and neatly dressed, and his wife wearing the first new cloak she had owned for five years. Mrs. Fred's call, though not strictly a fashionable one, was well timed and very productive of good results.
