THE LADY OF TEABS.

Through valley, and hamlet and city, Wherever humanity dwells, With a heart full of infinite pity. A breast that with smypathy swells, She walks, in her beauty immortal-Each nousehold grows sad as she nears But she crosses at length every portal, The mystical Lady of Tears.

If never this vision of sorrow Has shadowed your life in the past, You will meet her I know, serve to-mor row. She visits all hearthstones at last. To house and cottage and palace,

To servant and king, she appears, And offers the gall of her chalice-The unwelcome Lady of Tears.

But in midnight, lone hearts that are ach ing With the agonized numbness of grief, Are saved from the torture of breaking

By her bitter-sweet draugh: of relief. Ob, then do all graces enfold her-Like a goddess she looks and appears, And the eyes overflow that behold her, The beautiful Lady of Tears.

Though she turns to lamenting all laughter, Though she gives us despair for delight, Life holds s new meaning thereafter For those who but greet her aright. They stretch out their hands to each other, For sorrow smiles, and endears, The children of our tender mother-The sweet blessed Lady of Tears. -[Ella Wheeler, in Vanity Fair.

A FREAK OF NATURE.

An Ohio Monstrosity, With an Animal's Nature and a Voice Like a Cyclone.

Chillicothe Leader.

Marvelous as are the "freaks" gathered together by the show people, they haven't anything in the way of human curiosity to compare with a remarkable being confined in the county infirmary of Pike county. The creature is a man, but his right to that title rests solely upon the fact that he was born of woman. In every other respect he differs from his kind, and possesses no attributes in common with ordinary representatives of his sex. He bears upon his person, in his habits and vocal organs, all of the characteristics of a bull, in as nearly a perfect form as it is possible for a two-legged creature to possess them.

This remarkable being is named John and is forty years old. He is the son of very respectable parents, who, at the time of the monster's birth, lived in Pebble township. Twelve years ago the mother who gave birth to the unnatural object died, but the father is still living. Prior to the mother's death John was watched and cared for at home, but since her demise he has been confined at the in-by a stranger from those of a gorgeous bull. So unerring is John in his demonstration, that the residents of that locality rely upon him as their barome-ter, and he never fails to acquaint them with pending meteorological changes. He wears men's coarse clothing, after a manner peculiar to himself. He can-not be induced to use suspenders. He is frequently presented with those useful appendages to a male's toilet, but it matters not how bright and gaudy the colors may be, John will tear the suspenders up and ornament his neck, arms and legs with the pieces. He keeps his pantaloons in place by con-stantly holding them up by the band in front. When one hand is tired he catches a fresh grip with the other and struts around his dismal quarters with all the pomp and circumstance of a prize bull at an agricultural fair. He sleeps upon a small cot in one corner of his cell, having for his bed fellows a number of tin cans, bones and brickbats. He never removes his pantaloons, and nothing can induce him to wear shoes. He is a rugged, healthy creature, with a body like a bull and a voice like a Kansas cyclone. The man's history is a sad one. His mother, a very pleasant and intelligent woman, was one day crossing a field not far from their home a few months prior to John's birth. A vicious bull was pastured in the field, and when he caught sight of Mrs. Haines he came plunging toward her at full tilt, snorting angrily. The terribly affrighted woman ran with all speed to the nearest fence, and succeeded in getting on the other side of it before the bull, which was close in her wake, could harm her. The shock was a terrible one, and Mrs. Haines suffered for days from nervous prostration. The terrible effects of that fright were impressed upon her unborn child, and when he was ushered into the world the poor mother found that her offspring partook more of the nature of a bull than that of a human being. Her grief over this misfortune was pitiable, and for almost thirty years her life was embittered by a contemplation of the hideous child. When the wretched woman died John was removed to the infirmary, and has been confined there ever since.

GOVERNMENT LANDS.

Report on the Bill Submitted from the House Committee

The report submitted to accompany the bill reported from the house committee on public lands, providing for the repeal of the pre-emption and timber culture laws and an amendment to the homestead law. says: Under the pre-emption, homestead and timber culture laws, as they now stand, a person may become the owner of 480 acres of the public domain, 160 acres under each. This is too large an amount of land firmary. The existence of the mon-strosity is known to comparatively few people, and many of those who do know of his being have never seen him, being deterred from visiting his of our citizens with comfortable homes cell because of the terrible sight that ing this amount it will not be many years until all the public domain will be taken up. now." The pre-emption law was passed in 1841, by everybody who has occasion to speak about him, has been confined in the infirmary for twelve years. He is culture law should never have been passed. We have, therefore, provided for the repeal of the pre-emption and timber culture

Locomotive Engineer's Instinct-How He Saved a Train and How He Saved Himself.

BYE-CORN Oh one of the darkest and stormiest OATSnights of the recent unusual winter, FLOU the express on one of the leading New York railroads was moving westward LEMON from Albany. The engine's headlight BUTT BUTT threw a strong reflection in advance, but the storm was so blinding it was CHICK almost impossible to distinguish any-LETTI thing even at a short distance. Under CHICK such circumstances instinct necessarily ONION HAYtakes the place of sight. All seemed MESS to be going well, when, in an instant, the engineer reversed his engine, ap-SHEE STREF plied the air brakes, and came to a full Hogs stop. Why he did so he could not tell CALVI any more than any of us can account for the dread of coming disaster and WHEA death, and to the wondering inquiry of his fireman he simply said: "I feel that something's wrong." Seizing a lantern he swung himself down from the cab and went forward to investigate. Everything appeared to be right, and he was about to return to his engine when his eye caught sight of a peculiar appearance at the joint of the rail next to him.

Brushing the accumulated snow away, he looked a moment, and then uttered an exclamation of horror. The rails on both sides had been unspiked and would have turned over the instant the engine touched them. What inspired this attempt at train-wrecking is un-known, but it was presumed the confederates of some prisoners who were on the train hoped, in the confusion of an accident, to deliver their friends.

Engineer John Donohoe, of Albany, to whose wonderful instinct was due the salvation of the train, when asked by the writer why he stopped his engine, said :

"I can't tell why. I only know I felt something was wrong."

"Do you have these feelings often when upon the road?" continued the writer.

"No, very seldom, although for the past twenty years I have been in a condition to feel apprehension at almost anything."

Haines, or "John," as he is called of medium height, with a very large head, and the forehead strong and bold, with a strongly marked ridge running down the center of it. The law. sides of the head are flat, running back almost at right angles with the forehead, while the top of the head slopes backward and downward at a sharp incline, leaving the cranium without brain room. His face is darkskinned, heavy and brutish in expres-sion and very repulsive. The eyes are like those of a bovine, and roll about in his head in an animalish sort of a way. A heavy mouth, in which a restless tongue is almost constantly rolling a quid, strengthens the creature's like-ness to a bull. His large ears stand out from his head like those of an alarmed beast.

The long, thick and bushy head is covered by a close growth of short, coarse, stubby hair. His shoulders and breast are remarkable features of the monster, they being extraordinarily thick and heavy. He has a remarkable depth of chest, the formation of which bears a strong resemblance to that of his shaggy counterpart. From the breast downward his body gradually tapers to the thighs. His lower limbs are slender and joined together like those of a noble steer. The feet and hands are those of a man.

John is a remarkably strong and vigorous combination of flesh and bone, and prior to his confinement in Sherman 7, Solon Chase, of Maine 1. Gen-the infirmary he was noted for his eral Butler was nominated by acclamation wonderful speed on foot. He would dart away from his home into the woods and run like a hound for miles, making the air melodious as he went, bellowing like a bull. His actions are all governed by instinct. His reason is an infinitessimal quality.

He lacks the power of speech, and the only word that he can say that possesses meaning to his hearers is "bacca." He is intensely fond of tobacco, and the first thing a visitor hears when nearing his apartment is the cry, "Bacca! Bacca!"

When he is given a piece of the palatable leaf he tears it into little pieces, putting them into his mouth one at a time. He rolls the tobacco around with tongue like a cow treats a quid of grass, and finally swallows the masstobacco, saliva and all. Tobacco is a luxury that fills the poor creature with keen delight, and when he sees a pouch produced his eyes roll in pleasurable anticipation. John is kept in constant confinement in a little eight-by-ten cell, entrance to which is had through a barred door of heavy hickory strips. Just in the rear of this is an inclosure twenty or thirty feet square, and unroofed. The fence surrounding it is about twenty feet in height. This is John's exercising yard. He possesses the instincts of a bull, and is strongly affected by changes of the weather. He becomes greatly excited just before a rain, thunder, snow or wind storm, and will plunge out into his exercisingpen, tear around at a fearful rate, paw exceptions, but in the main this seems up the earth, and bellowing most to us to be about the sense and sub-

The Antimonopolists National Convention.

The national convention of the antimonopoly party met at Chicago on the 14th. The call provided for between 1,500 and 1,600 delegates. At the opening there were about 200 delegates present. The conven-tion was called to order by J. F. Henry, chairman of the national committee.

A motion was then made to proceed to the nomination of candidates for president. Gen. Butler was then put in nomination successively by Mrs. Todd, (of California, Mr. Rooney, of New York, and several others. Mr. Blanchard, of Vermont, put in nomination J. B. Weaver, of Iowa. The chair here announced that he had just had an interview with Mr. Weaver and that gentleman had not only declared that he would not accept the nomination, but was in favor of General Butler. Mr. Barnd, of Nebraska, nominated Allen G. Thurman. On the informal ballot Butler received 124, and the convention adjourned.

Cutting Rates---U. P. Earnings.

A Denver dispatch of the 14th says: The war on eastern passenger rates con-tinues, and crowds throng the streets in front of the uptown offices. The following rates are builtined: Missouri river points, distance 635 miles, $3; St. Louis, $5; Chi-cago, $7; New York, $25, with propor-tional rates to other eastern points. It is stated that scalpers are selling tickets to New York for $20.

A Boston dispatch says the earnings of the whole system of the Union Pacific road for March was $1,792,700, an increase over March of last year of $419,000. For the first three months of 1884 the earnings were $5,059,600, an increase of $722,250 compared with the same period of 1883.

The Age of the Newspaper.

Roston Conrier.

Public attention is absorbed by the newspaper; and it is to the periodical press press that the literary man owes both his salvation and his ruin. The large class of people who read simply to kill time, satisfy all literary cravings by drinking at the streams, clear or muddy, as the case may be, of their pet newspapers; and even the lighter class of stories appeal to them but seldom unless served up in long columns and sent through the postoffice. It is emphatically the age of the newspaper, and both author and preacher are rapidly finding themselves reduced to the choice between working for the periodical press and abandoning the field altogether. Of course, there are striking alst of May. The members of the national

"You certainly do not look that way the acts.

"Oh, no, indeed, I am in perfect health now," was the reply, "and I propose to continue so. My nervousness is entirely gone; I can sleep nights; the aching numbress has disappeared; the pale, sickly appearance has given place to the color of health, and I have readily put on flesh. This is what has been accomplished by means of Warner's Tippecanoe. If I can be cured after a chronic illness of nearly a quarter of a century I believe all suffering in a similar manner can be restored by using the same great remedy."

Such is the testimony of a man who could detect and remove unseen danger on the road, but could not remove the dangers from within his own system until brought face to face with the great preparation above named, which did so much for him and can do as much for all those who require it.

A RAILROAD SMASH-UP.

In Which Fifteen or Twenty Laborers Lose Their Lives.

A west-bound freight train collided vith a gravel train on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, one mile east of Connells-ville, and a number of laborers, variously estimated at from twelve to twenty, were killed and many injured. Both trains were going at high speed and came together with a terrible crash. The engines remained on the track and telescoped each other into the smose-stack, but the heavy tenders jumped into the air and fell, the freight tender upon its engine and the gravel train tender back upon the first car in the rear of it. Here was a scene of death. Six men were killed outright in this car and four others were fastened down by broken timbers and were roasted to death, the car catching fire from an overturned stove, and burning up before the stupefied survivors could comprehend the awful situation of their shrieking companions. The wreck itself was a ghastly sight. The tender of the freight engine stood thirty feet in the sir at the side of the iron car that was burned. There could be seen sit-ting amid the glowing embers, twisted iron rods and dead ashes, three grinning skeletons, one sitting bolt upright, apparently peering into the flames that had smothered out his life as well as those of his compan-

When the wreck was cleared away it was discovered that twelve persons had been injured and fourteen more missing. The bodies of ten of those missing were recovered. The others are supposed to have been completely consumed. Of those recovered only two were partially identified. The others were burned shapeless. The verdict of the corner's jury is to the effect that the collision was due to the care-lessness of train dis patcher Gilbert Lewis.
