Lieut. Greely and Six Others Rescued in the Nick of Time.

Seven Out of the Original Twenty-five Perish in the Arctic Region.

Horrible Details of the Manner in Which the Brave Explorers Were Compelled to Subsist.

The acting secretary of the navy received a telegram from St. Johns on the 17th stating that the Greely expedition had found the survivors of Greely's party. The survivors number seven men in all. Their names are Lieutenant Greely, Sergeant Brainard, Sergeant Fredericks, Sergeant Long, Sergeant Ellison, Hospital Steward Bieberback and Private Connel. They were found by the relief ships "Thetis" and "Bear," five miles off Cape Sabine in Smith's sound. Sergeant Ellison was very badly frost-bitten and died at Godhavn on July 6th while undergoing a surgical operation. The relief ships "Thetis" and "Bear," with the survivors, are now at St. Johns, N. F.

The following is a second telegram received at the navy department: Mr. Johns, N. F., July 17.—9 a. m.—To Hon. H. B. Chandler, Secretary of the Navy, Washington: The "Thetis," "Bear" and "Lock Garry" arrived here to-day from West Greenland. All were separated from the "Alert" one hundred and fifty miles north during a gale. At 6 o'clock p. m. on June 22nd, five miles off Cape Sabine, in Smith's sound, the "Thetis" and "Bear" rescued alive Lieutenant A. W. Greely, Sergeant Brainard, Sergeant Fredericks, Sergeant Long, Hospital Steward Bieberback, Private Connel, Sergeant Ellison, the only survivors of the Lady Franklin Bay expedition. Sergeant Ellison lost both his hands by frost bite and died July 6th at Godhavn, three days after amputation, which had become imperative. Seventeen of the twenty-five persons composing the expedition perished by starvation at the point where they were found. One was drowned while sealing to procure food. Twelve bodies of the dead men were rescued and are now on board the "Thetis" and "Bear." One Esquimaux, Turnedike, was buried at Disco, in accordance with the desire of the inspector of Western Greenland. Five bodies, buried in ice near the camp, were swept away to sea by the winds and currents before my arrival and could not be recovered. The names of the dead recovered, with date of death, are as follows: Sergeant Cross, January 1, 1884; Wederick, an Esquimaux, April 1, 1884; Sergeant Long, April 18th; Lieutenant Lockwood, April 19th; Sergeant Jewell, April 12th; Private Ellis, May 19th; Sergeant Ralston, May 23rd; Private Henry, June 18th. The names of the dead buried in the ice fort, with date of death, whose bodies were not recovered, are as follows: Sergeant Rice, April 9th, 1884; Corporal Sahn, June 3rd; Private Bender, June 6th; Assistant Surgeon Pavy, June 6th; Sergeant Gardner, June 12th; drowned by breaking through newly formed ice while sealing. I would earnestly suggest that the bodies now on board be placed in metallic cases here for safer and better transportation in a sea way. This appears to me imperative. Greely abandoned Fort Conger, August 1, 1883, and reached Baird Inlet September 20th following, with the entire party well. He abandoned all his boats and was adrift for thirty days on an ice floe in Smith's Sound. His permanent camp was established October 21, 1883, at a point where he was found. During nine months his party had to live upon a scanty supply of food brought from Fort Conger and that cached at Payer harbor and Cape Isabella by Sir George Nares in 1881, but they found it much damaged by lapse of time; that cached by Beebe at Cape Sabine in 1882, a small amount saved from the wreck of the "Proteus" in 1883, and landed by Lieutenants Garding and Connel on the "Thetis" and Greely's party was found. When these provisions were consumed the party was forced to live upon boiled seal skin stripped from their sealskin clothing, and lichens and shrimps caught in good weather, which they were strong enough to make exertions. As it took 1.80 shrimps to fill a gallon measure, the labor was too exhausting to depend upon them to sustain life entirely. The channel between Cape Sabine and Littleton island did not freeze until the middle of the winter, so that 240 rations at the latter point could not be reached. All Greely's records and all the instruments brought by him from Fort Conger are recovered and are on board. From Littleton Island to Smith's sound I had a constant and furious struggle with impassible fogs. Solid barriers were overcome by watchfulness and patience. No opportunity to advance a mile escaped me, and for several hundred miles the ship was forced to ram their way from lead to lead through ice varying in thickness from three to six feet, and when ratted much greater. The "Thetis" and "Bear" reached Cape York June 15th, after a passage of twenty-one days, in Melville Bay with two advance ships of the Dundee whaling fleet, and continued to Cape Sabine, returning seven days later and fell in with the "Alert" off the feet of Western Greenland and announced Greely's rescue to them, that they might not be delayed from their fishing grounds nor be tempted into the dangers of Smith's sound in view of the reward of $25,000 offered in April 1883, for returning to Melville Bay they fell in with the "Alert" and "Lock Garry" off the Devil's Thumb, struggling through heavy ice. Commander Coffin did admirably to get along so far with the transport, and early in the season, before an opening had occurred, Lieut. Emery with the "Bear" has supported me throughout with great skillfulness and unflinching readiness in accomplishing difficult tasks in relieving Greely. The Greely party are much improved since their rescue, but were in a critical condition in the extreme when found and for several days after. Forty-eight hours delay in reaching them would have been fatal to all now living. Smith's sound was later than for years. Smith's sound was not open when I left Cape Sabine. The winter about Melville Bay was the most severe in twenty years. The great result is entirely due to the unwearied energy of yourself and the secretary of war in arranging for the expedition for the work it has had the honor to accomplish.

(Signed) W. S. SCHLEY, Commander.

DISPATCH FROM LIEUT. GREELY.

St. Johns, July 17.—To the chief signal officer, Washington: Brainard, Bieberback, Connel, Fredericks, Long and myself, the sole survivors, arrived to-day, having been rescued at the point of death from starvation, by the relief ships "Thetis" and "Bear" on June 22nd, at Camp Clay, northwest of Cape Sabine. All are now in good health but weak. Sergeant Ellis, rescued, died in July. Cross died last January, Christiansen, Linn, Rice, Lockwood, Jewell and Edwards in April. Wheeler, returning to Mary, Klingbury, Sahn, Henry, Bender, Pavy, Gardner and Schneider in June. We abandoned Fort Conger August 9th, and were frozen in an ice pack off Victoria Head August 29th. Abandoned the steam launch September 11th, and were driven to the ice-cooked Hat Island. When on the point of landing we were three times driven by the southwest storms into Kane's sea. We finally landed September 29 in Baird Inlet. Learning by scouting parties of the Porteus disaster and that no provisions had been left for us from Cape Isabella to Sabine, we moved and established winter quarters at Camp Clay, half way between Sabine and Cooked Hat. An inventory showed that by a daily ration of four and one-half ounces of meat, seven ounces of bread and dog biscuits and four ounces of miscellaneous stuff, the party would have ten days' full rations left for crossing Smith's sound to Littleton Island. Unfortunately Smith's sound remained open the entire winter, rendering crossing impracticable. Game failed, despite daily hunting, from early February. Before the sun returned only 500 pounds of meat was obtained. This year, minute shrimps, seaweed, sea-weed, rock-lickers and seal skin were resorted to for food, with the results as shown by the number of survivors. The last regular food issued was on May 14th. There were only 140 pounds of meat left by Godhavn. I was compelled September 11th to abandon the party, and to obtain 144 pounds of English meat in Cape Isabella. During the trip Edison had frozen solid both hands and feet and lost them all, surviving, however, through the terrible winter and spring until July 8th. The survivors owe their lives to the indomitable energy of Captain Schley and Lieutenant Emery, who, preceded by three and accompanied by five whalers, forced their vessels from Upernivik through Melville Bay into the north water at Cape York with the force of the "Thetis." They gained, and where ever possible and always held it. Smith's sound was crossed and the party rescued during one of the most violent gales that ever been known. The boats were handled only at imminent risk of swamping. Four of us were then unable to walk and could not have survived exceeding twenty-four hours. Every care and attention were given us. We saved and we bring back copies of the meteorological, tidal, and magnetic observations, pendulum and other observations; also a pendulum, Yale and standard thermometer. Forty-eight photographic negatives, collection blanks, photographic proofs, Esquimaux relics and other objects were necessarily abandoned. The Thetis remains here five days, I probably.

(Signed) GREELY, Commanding.

Seven Wise Men Baffled.

The New York Morning Journal says that Mrs. F. G. Kellogg, 50 E. 86th St., was partially paralyzed, and lay for seven days in convulsions. Physicians were engaged and discharged until seven had failed to help or cure her. She was unable to leave her bed, and was as helpless as a child. After using all sorts of salves, ointments, lotions and plasters, her case was given up as hopeless. She was induced to try St. Jacobs Oil as a last chance. She began to improve from the time the first application was made, and by its continued use she has completely recovered.

The Romance of a Solitary Gulch.

In one of the gulches of the gold mining district of the Divide, probably twenty-five miles from Denver, stand the remains of a cabin, if a few blackened and charred timbers and a pile of stones, evidently at one time a chimney, can be called remains. To the miners and prospectors who pass over the rough trail to-day the place has a lonely and mournful look and many speculations are indulged in as to the history and fate of its former occupants.

From 1858 until 1864 this wild and almost uninhabited country was filled with a busy population who had left comfortable homes and loving friends in the east in the wild pursuit of gold in these rich diggings. In the latter year, however, the number dwindled from several thousand to perhaps less than a score of white men, new excitement having carried the restless tide in other directions. Among the few who remained were two brothers who had left their home in a pleasant town in Illinois to make their fortunes in these marvellously rich placers. These were Thomas and William Coleman, who, though so closely related, were as utterly different in disposition and manner as could well be imagined. Thomas, who was of a dark and swarthy complexion, was always moose and disagreeable, and generally disliked by his neighbors. William, however, with his bright, blue eyes and sunny hair, was ever a favorite with all. But little was known of their previous history save that the elder was unmarried, but that William had left a young wife and one child in the east. It was known, also, to a few, that this marriage was a continual source of contention between the two, and it was generally understood that the brothers had been formerly rivals for the hand of the girl whom William afterward married. One day, in the summer of 1864, the stage, which was still running in that section, brought as a passenger a beautiful woman to the cabin who proved to be the wife of William Coleman. The meeting of the couple was joyous to a degree, she explaining that parents and child having both died, she had resolved to join her husband and individually share his fortunes and hardships. Upon her arrival Thomas went out of the house and wandered a long distance over ridges and through gulches, nor returned until long after dark. Just exactly what happened after he reached the cabin was never known, but it is surmised that a fierce quarrel and double murder ensued, as late that night a man passing near there on horseback thought he heard loud and angry words followed by two reports from a pistol, and looking back after getting on top of the ridge he saw the bright light of a conflagration. Upon reaching the nearest settlement he reported what he had seen. A party of men started the next day to investigate the matter, and found the charred remains of the cabin and beneath the still smoking ruins the burned bodies of William Coleman and his wife. Thomas Coleman was never afterwards heard of. The place to-day has a mournful loneliness and silence, unbroken save by the twitter of birds by day and the howling of the coyote at night.

THE CATTLE TRAFFIC.

Rumors of a War on Rates Between the East Bound Roads.

The cattle traffic from Nebraska points will begin in about two weeks, and if an understanding is not reached by the roads interested before that time a live war on rates is very probable. The Chicago Tribune says that several conferences have lately been held between General Manager Potter, of the Burlington, and General Manager S. H. Clark, of the Union Pacific, but the prospects for an amicable agreement are not very flattering, owing to the reluctance of the Burlington to treat with the Western Union Pacific. Last year the Union Pacific had an exclusive arrangement with the Rock Island and Milwaukee & St. Paul roads, by which the latter received the bulk of the Union Pacific cattle traffic. But at that time the Iowa pool, to which the Burlington was a party, was still in existence, and the Burlington received its allotted percentage east of the river. Since then, however, the Iowa pool has been busted, and the Western Union Pacific association formed, which makes all the Iowa lines allies of the Union Pacific, except the Burlington. Under the new state of things all the Union Pacific's cattle business would go to its eastern allies, and the Burlington would receive nothing. The Burlington and Missouri River line in Nebraska. The Burlington contends that it is entitled to a share of the business from the Union Pacific at Omaha, and threatens to open a war on rates if it is not granted. It is claimed that the Union Pacific would be willing to make a few concessions rather than have a war, but is not willing to do anything without the consent of its eastern allies, and they, of course, are anxious to keep all their own.

Shot in a Saloon.

In Germantown, Pa., John S. Sutton, a building contractor, entered the saloon of Joseph E. Songster on Miller street about 10 o'clock in the morning. A discussion over the Chicago convention arose. Songster, who is a democrat, made an insulting remark about Blaine, and said that Cleveland or any other democrat could beat him. Sutton cautioned him facetiously against talking that way in this Blaine stronghold, and Songster retorted that he would make a hole through a Blaine man any day. Without provocation the saloonkeeper went behind the bar, obtained a revolver of large calibre and pointing it at Sutton's head liberally fired, the bullet entering the brain about two inches above the right ear. The wounded man fell to the floor and was taken as quickly as possible to the Germantown hospital, where he died. His assailant is under arrest. Sutton is a man of some prominence in political circles and leaves a large family.
